NAVAL BATTLE

By CHARLES A. SMITH

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 27—The 16,697-ton British armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi, one of the major victims of Nazi Germany's naval warfare, was sent to the bottom by the pocket battleship Deutschland, now on the loose in northern waters, it was officially announced tonight.

The latest exploit of the famous German sea raider was revealed in a communique issued by the British admiralty which disclosed that a battle of considerable proportions preceded the vessel's sinking.

The Rawalpindi, once a luxury liner of the Peninsula & Orient line which operates between England and the Far East, was attacked by the Deutschland and another German warship, as yet unidentified.

At the time, the Rawalpindi was operating as part of the northern patrol, presumably assigned to the North sea.

"Search for the two enemy warships," the announcement said, "is continuing in tempestuous weather both by night and the brief hours of daylight."

The reference to "brief hours of daylight" was believed to indicate the Rawalpindi was sent to the bottom far to the north and by the same token to show that the Deutschland had fought her way clear of the British mine fields and warship belts in the lower reaches of the North sea.

The admiralty statement said unqualifiedly that the Deutschland was involved in the dramatic naval encounter. It was this vessel which in October sank the British freighter Stonegate, the Norwegian Lorentz W. Hansen and captured the American freighter City of Flint and boarded her with a prize crew which took her to Murmansk, Russia, before being obliged to surrender her to her American crew later at Bergen, Norway.

Following is the official communique issued by the British admiralty:

"At 3:30 p. m. on Nov. 23, when cruising southeast of Iceland, the Rawalpindi sighted an enemy vessel. Capt. Kennedy (of the Rawalpindi), having examined this vessel through his glasses, said: 'It's the Deutschland all right.'

"The crew immediately was ordered to action stations. The course was altered to bring the enemy to the starboard quarter.

"Smoke-floats were lit and cast on the water to enable the Rawalpindi to escape. However, a second enemy ship soon was seen to starboard.

"The Deutschland, approaching, then signalled the Rawalpindi.

"When she (the Rawalpindi) continued her course, a shot was fired across her bows.

"As this warning was rejected, the first salvo was fired by the 11-inch guns of the Deutschland a little after 3:45 p. m. at a range of 10,000 yards. The Rawalpindi replied with all her four starboard six-inch guns.

"A third salvo from the Deutschland put out all her lights and broke the electric winches of the ammunition supply. The fourth salvo shot away the whole bridge and the wireless room.

"Both German ships were now closing rapidly. By this time, the second had gone around the Rawalpindi's stern and was firing from the port side. The Rawalpindi maintained the fight until every gun was put out of action.

"The whole ship was ablaze except the forecastle and the poop. After about 30 or 40 minutes of this unequal combat, or about 4:15 p. m., the enemy ceased firing and three boats which were not shattered by shell-fire—one of which became waterlogged—were lowered.

"Two of these boats containing over 30 men were picked up, it is believed, by one of the German ships.

"Eleven survivors who have been brought in by the Chitral swam to a waterlogged lifeboat and would probably have been picked up (by the Germans), but for the fact that about 6:15 p. m., approach of a British cruiser caused the enemy immediately to withdraw.

(Editor's Note: The Chitral is a 15,000-ton passenger liner of the Peninsula and Orient Line. The communique was the first mention of the fact that the Chitral was involved in the affair in any way and indicated that she, like the Rawalpindi, may have been converted into an armed cruiser.))

"The Rawalpindi continued to burn amidships until 8 p. m., when she turned turtle to starboard and foundered with all remaining hands.

"Meanwhile, the British cruiser attempted to shadow the German ships, but in a sudden heavy rainstorm and the darkness of the night they made their escape from the scene.

"This account was given in the narrative of 11 survivors picked up in the waterlogged boat by the Chitral and, of course, is subject to correction in detail.

"It is, however, sufficient to show that the Rawalpindi made a most gallant fight against overwhelming odds and went down with colors flying.

"Search for the two enemy warships is continuing in tempestuous weather, both by night and in the brief hours of daylight."

BIG DUTCH LINER SUNK IN THAMES

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 27—The wave of destruction among the allied and neutral shipping in British waters mounted ever higher today as Great Britain took its first major measure of retaliation against allegedly indiscriminate mine-laying by Nazi Germany.

At the moment word was received in London that the Dutch passenger liner Spaarndam and the British freighter Royston Grange had gone down near England, King George VI signed an order in council authorizing seizure of German exports as a measure of reprisal.

It was officially announced that the Spaarndam had struck a mine, while the Royston Grange was torpedoed.

The new sinkings followed by only a few hours loss of the 16,697-ton British auxiliary cruiser Rawalpindi and the $6,000,000 former Polish passenger liner Pilsudski at a cost of some 300 lives.

Four seamen and an elderly woman passenger identified as an American were killed in the sinking of the 8859-ton freighter, it was announced.

A Reuters (British news agency) report from Amsterdam said the woman passenger was a "Mrs. Stefen."

Previous reports said the crew of about 40 and an elderly woman passenger were rescued by a pilot cutter.

The Spaarndam went down after striking a mine in the Thames Estuary, which the British last week announced had been swept clear of mines after being closed to all traffic for several hours.

The Spaarndam was bound for South America from Rotterdam.

LONDON, Nov. 27 (INS)—Lifeboats were launched along the northeastern coast of Kent tonight in answer to an SOS from an unidentified vessel which struck a mine.

The moment the vessel struck, an SOS was sent and the crew, numbering approximately 40 men, took to the boats.

A lifeboat from a nearby Coast Guard station went to the scene, only to find the crew alwready had been taken aboard a pilot cutter.

Thirty-six members of the crew of the 5144-ton freighter Royston Grange were landed at a West Coast port. They were afloat in boats for only an hour before being picked up.

THAMES STILL A PERIL

Despite the new sinkings and disclosure that the Thames Estuary is still a death trap, British naval authorities insisted they had found ways and means of combating the new German mine menace. It was in the Thames Estuary that German fliers were reported to have dropped parachute mines from bombing planes.

These naval sources emphasized the declaration of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in his broadcast to the United States yesterday that Britain will defeat Germany's mine warfare "as we have defeated their U-boats."

The Royal Navy, an official spokesman said, is now "on top of" the magnetic mine menace.

"Shipping will not be endangered much longer," he said.

The spokesman announced a "tremendous response" to the ad-

2 New Bills Returned in Dowd Probe

Four scrubwomen and seven other county employes were listed as victims of job sales today in two more indictments returned against John F. Dowd, ex-sheriff of Suffolk County.

The indictments brought to 60 the total of employes from whom the missing official is alleged to have solicited and accepted bribes in return for their jobs.

Those on whose charges he was indicted today are Mrs. Margaret Berry, who said she paid $200; Mrs. Vera Solway, $150; Mrs. Matilda Smith, $150, and Mrs. Margaret Curran, $200.

Charge Gross Laxity On Gale Repair Work

In a report which bristles with charges of laxity in the Department of Conservation, State Auditor Russell A. Wood today completed a three months' investigation into $1,235,100 worth of hurricane damage contracts for work in state forests, parks and fish and game propagation stations.

The report, handed to Governor Saltonstall and to Atty.-Gen. Paul A. Dever, charges that Commissioner Ernest J. Dean illegally transferred $50,000 of one $98,000 fund from the fish and game division to the forestry division.

It charges that Commissioner Dean permitted the purchase of trucks which "in no way" came under the provisions of $850,000 granted him by the Legislature for hurricane and flood damage in the state forests.

After turning in his report Wood told reporters who asked him what it contained:

"I am charging gross mismanagement in the affairs of the conservation commission."

The Governor, when asked if he had anything to say about the report, answered:

"I have no comment to make until I have completed reading the report."

When Dean was asked by reporters if he intended to resign as the result of charges in the report he replied:

"That's the farthest thing from my mind. I see nothing in the report which would cause me to resign."

FAILED TO CHECK BILLS

Sprinkled through the report also were charges, that requests were made for thousands of dollars from the Legislature for repair work where "no damage" was reported at the time of the hurricane.

Total appropriations made to the department by the special session of the Legislature called to act on the hurricane and flood damage question were $1,235,100.

From these appropriations the department had scheduled payments of $713,573.99 to the Benjamin Foster Co., Philadelphia con-

$800 Safe Robbery At Greek Church

Theft of $800 from a safe in the office of the Greek Orthodox Church, Ruggles and Parker sts., Roxbury, was reported to Roxbury police today.

George Kardaras, sexton, discovered the door of the safe broken and the contents strewn about the floor.

Romeo Sets Law After Juliet's Dad

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—Manhattan's modern Romeo, lovelorn George Lowther, 3d, was in a legal sword-yanking mood today, all set to smite his missing Juliet's daddy, former Park Commissioner Walter R. Herrick, hip and thigh with a contempt citation in Judge Wasservogel's court.

Meantime, young Lowther continued his increasingly feverish search for vanished Miss Eileen "Juliet" Herrick, the sweetheart a court order had promised to restore to his arms.

The order directed that Eileen's parents stop putting barriers between her and Lowther. And it specifically directed the sweethearts should be allowed to meet after 5 p. m. Saturday.

SEEKS LAW'S AID

Eileen was missing at that time, however. And all young Lowther could learn, up to today, was that she was "spirited" from a New York rest hospital to "somewhere in Long Island."

Woeful—but wrathful, too—the Manhattan Romeo swore today he'd have the law again on Papa Herrick.

With a wedding license figuratively in his pocket, and with his head as full of rosy plans as his heart was of love, Lowther was sitting on the hospital steps at 5 p. m. Saturday, the court-ordered "deadline."

ONE HELPFUL CRUMB

But "Juliet" didn't keep the date. She wasn't home and she wasn't at the hospital.

Tireless week-end sleuthing brought young Lowther only crumbs of information. But one of these crumbs was a helpful one.

HUNT FOR MISSING YOUNG MOTHER OF 'LITTLE BOY BLUE'

Boston police today were searching for a young mother, an attractive brunette, who left her three weeks' old baby in the care of a Shawmut ave. rooming housekeeper on Saturday night "for only 10 minutes"—and then disappeared.

LITTLE BOY BLUE
Police Hunt His Mother

The infant, healthy and well dressed is in City Hospital, known to the doctors and nurses as "Little Boy Blue." He was wrapped in a pink and blue blanket.

Mrs. Wilhelmina MacFarlane of Shawmut ave., turned the baby over to the police late last night and explained how the child came to be in her care.

Mrs. MacFarlane said that the infant's mother, known to her as Mildred Manning, and whom she knew as a former roomer, had called at her home with the baby on Saturday night.

"My husband and I want a room in your house," Mrs. MacFarlane quoted the young mother as saying.

Informed that there were no rooms vacant in the house, "Mildred Manning," who had lived in the MacFarlane house until last May, asked Mrs. MacFarlane to care for the baby.

"I'll be back in 10 minutes. We just want to see if we can get a room along Shawmut ave," she said, according to Mrs. MacFarlane.

Late last night she decided that the child should be turned over to the police. The police in turn, thought that City Hospital would be the proper place for the infant.

"Mildred Manning" was described in police broadcasts as an attractive brunette, 22 years old, wearing a blue coat. Police also were checking hospitals to determine where the child was born.

"Little Boy Blue" wore a pink bonnet, a white jacket and pink sox.

Settlement Of Logan Bank Claim Balked

An attempt by the receiver of the defunct Federal National Bank to settle a claim of more than $200,000 against the estate of Lawrence J. Logan, South Boston, was blocked in federal court today.

The receiver recommended settling claims for about $35,000. Atty. Louis J. O'Malley, representing depositors in the closed bank objected and asked Judge George C. Sweeney for a one week's continuance. It was granted.

O'Malley contended that settling the claim for such a sum was unfair to the depositors who lost huge sums when the bank closed its doors during the bank holiday of 1933.

The bank's receiver, Frederick S. Deitrich, petitioned the court to compromise a claim against Theodore M. Logan, as administrator for the Lawrence Logan estate.

The claim of $134,800 was secured by five notes. Collateral security was in the form of 1200 shares of Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance company stock and 600 shares of stock in the closed State National Bank of Lynn.

The latter stock is now worthless.

Counsel for the depositors asked another week in which to study the deal which would surrender all the bank's rights to further claim on the estate because of the notes and loans mentioned.

Kills 2, Self After Shooting Wife, Dad

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27 (AP)—A young man crept into the home of his estranged wife early today, shot to death two women of her family, wounded his wife and her father, then took his own life,

Detective Peter McCormick said Stanley Krygier, 30, sent bullets into the hearts of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Nieckoski, 45, and her 17-year-old daughter Florence, as they ran for a stairway to escape.

Wounded in the chest, Krygier's 22-year-old wife, Regina, sought to escape by plunging through her bedroom window to a porch roof. Krygier followed her, the detective said, and beat her with a hammer until she rolled to the pavement.

INJURED FATHER FLEES

Her father, Felix Nieckoski, 57, was shot in the chest, but fled the building by knotting together several sheets, tying them to a bedpost and lowering himself. He fell and broke his ankle.

McCormick said the young husband, a construction laborer, was maddened by jealousy of his wife and wanted her to establish a home away from her family.

The landlady at a rooming house where Krygier had stayed since he left his wife at Eastertime told police he had practiced marksmanship in the cellar of the home every week.

Police found Krygier's wife and his father-in-law wounded on the pavement.

SHOOTS SELF IN NECK

The body of Krygier, with a bullet through the neck, lay inside the door with a pistol beside it.

The bodies of Mrs. Nieckoski and Florence were on the second floor. The mother and daughter had been shot through the heart.

Mrs. Krygier and her father were in critical condition. The woman had been beaten on the head, shot near the heart and suffered a possible broken leg. Her father had been shot in the chest and suffered a broken right ankle.

Finds Husband Dead, Victim of Monoxide Gas

His life snuffed out by carbon monoxide fumes, Edward J. Wells, factory official, was found today by his wife slumped behind the wheel of his car in the garage adjoining their home in Ferndale rd., Wollaston.

Mrs. Wells, mother of two children, told Medical Examiner George D. Dalton that she found the garage doors closed, the ignition on and the gas tank dry.

Her husband, she said, had been in ill health and despondent for some time.

Mrs. Wells said she last saw her husband alive in bed at 2:30 a. m. Later in the morning, she discovered his absence and investigated. Wells was clad in pajamas, overcoat and shoes.

Wells, 38, was factory superintendent of the Simplex Wire Cable Co., Cambridge.

Raps Politics In Kuhn Case

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP)—Fritz Kuhn's counsel today reiterated his charge that politics was behind the prosecution of the German-American Bund leader on larceny and forgery charges.

Before argument started Judge James G. Wallace announced that he would allow the jury to take the case on five counts of the original ten-count indictment and after he had dismissed 32 motions for a mistrial based on various grounds.

Kuhn is accused of stealing $1217 from the Bund treasury, $717 of which was used to pay the furniture-moving expenses of Mrs. Florence Camp, according to the state.

Sabbatino, Kuhn's counsel, attacked the state's introduction of Kuhn's "Golden Angel" love letters.

"He liked Mrs. Camp," the lawyer said, "or, if you will, he was in love with her. What of it? What did that have to do with the case?"

TOBIN PAID CASH FOR RADIO TALKS

Called as a witness in the "radio war" hearing at the federal building, Mayor Tobin testified today he paid cash in advance for radio time used in two campaign speeches in his behalf made by Yankee Network News Service Editor Leland Bickford.

John Shepard, 3d, owner of the Yankee Network and radio stations WAAB and WNAC never asked him any favor, the mayor told Trial Examiner George Porter of the Federal Communications Commission.

Under cross-examination by Atty. James Gum, counsel for the Mayflower Broadcasting Corp., Mayor Tobin said tax abatements granted the Shepard stores in opening months of the Tobin administration were "a matter wholly in the hands of the assessors."

Tobin said he believed the abatements were "about half" the figure previously quoted in testimony. This figure was $105,000.

"The stores had closed," the mayor testified. "There were many tax appeals in the hands of the assessors and the state board. I thought the assessors did the best they could to get as much as they could."

Calling of Mayor Tobin as a witness came as sequel to a charge by the Mayflower Broadcasting Corp. that Tobin was unduly favored by WAAB and WNAC in political campaigns.

Tobin opponents, including former Mayor Nichols, former Governor Curley and others were victims of this alleged favoritism, according to the Mayflower corporation claim.

Seeking a permit for use of the broadcasting wave length now used by WAAB, the Mayflower Broadcasting Corporation argues that it would give "unbiased" service, as contrasted with WAAB "prejudice."

Plan Patriarca Pardon Sift

Evidence uncovery by investigators for Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk County, in connection with the parole of Raymond Patriarca, notorious bandit, will be presented to the grand jury next Monday, it was learned today.

Patriarca was pardoned under parole conditions in the closing weeks of the administration of Ex-Gov. Hurley, after he had served 84 days of a minimum three-year sentence in State prison for armed robbery.

The storm of protest over the release of Patriarca caused a pardon and parole probe to be launched by the Legislature.

Rep. Phillip G. Bowker, of Brookline, member of the legislative committee investigating pardons and paroles, has turned over bits of evidence to the Norfolk County prosecutor's office.

Robart declined to give the names of those whom he recommended for pardons.

All Faiths Here Join In Pope's 'Peace Week'

Joining in a vast mobilization of the moral power of the Church, Boston leaders of all faiths—Catholic, Protestant and Jewish—today opened a week of prayer for peace.

For the entire week, designated by Pope Pius XII as "Peace Week," the faithful of all denominations are asked to offer prayers that the wars already ravaging a great portion of the earth be brought to an end.

It is understood that Pope Pius may renew his appeal for world peace within the next few weeks in stronger, more ardent terms than heretofore.

In thousands of churches throughout the American nation today, from stately cathedrals to humble missions, prayers were offered up that all wars cease and the world be saved from devastation.

In all Catholic churches fo the Boston archdiocese masses contained an aditional prayer, taken from the ancient liturgy of The mass for peace, and will be repeated at each service throughout the week.

This example was followed by leaders and clergy of all other faiths.

Beginning Dec. 8, the feast day of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virginia Mary, a series of peace novenas will be conducted in many Catholic churches throughout the city.

Santason Due Here Thursday

It's a long, cold, flight from his lonely hut up at the frozen North Pole, but, barring accidents—and he doesn't ever have 'em—Santason will be in Boston on time.

Santason will land in his airplane on the Charles river basin on Thursday morning, according to holiday custom, just in time to lead the 11th annual Santason Thanksgiving Day parade through Boston's children-thronged streets.

The line of march will move from Embankment rd., beginning at 11 a. m., along Beacon st., School, Washington, Summer, Chauncey, Essex, back to Washington, to Stuart, Tremont, West, Washington, and Avon. Over 2000 persons will take part in the parade.

And for the children this year, Santason has bigger and better surprises than ever, and his parade, that spectacular pageant of color and fun, will be more amazing and delightful than ever before.

The old familiar characters will be in line of march; the gaily dressed clowns, the beloved figures of fable and caricature, the colorful floats and the stirring military bands.

NEW MARVELS

But this year there will be new marvels to enchant the children—and, incidentally, the grownups. For the startling feature of the parade will be five tremendous animated balloons—massive monsters who will walk, talk, and play music.

Most gigantic of the balloons will be Gulliver of "Gulliver's Travels," sleeping and snoring and held down upon his gigantic bed by a crew of 50 men. Gulliver is more than 100 feet long, and his gorgeous snores can be heard blocks away.

Next largest of the animated balloons will be Ali Baba and his band of 40 thieves. Ali is over 50 feet tall, and his voice will ring out in orders to his band to hide themselves in the large jars.

A Musical Pig, soaring 40 feet into the air, will play the latest swing music on a saxophone 15 feet long. And an enormous Scotchman, complete with bagpipes, kilties, and a varied program of music, will wail forth his dolorous tunes. And not to be overlooked among the musical balloons will be an Organ Grinder 20 feet tall, and his pet monkey.

PINOCCHIO STARS

Central figure of the parade is the beloved story book character Pinocchio, that playful and mischievous small boy carved from a piece of wood by his father, Geppetto the carpenter. An entire series of floats will depict the adventurous life of Pinocchio, his hazardous escapes from fire, his treasure of gold, his human and animal friends. And the last and most beautiful float of all will show Pinocchio greeting Santason and Santa Claus.

There will be more than two dozens of New England's leading bands, including the 60-piece Boston Firemen's Band, the 40-piece police band, and the most noted bands of the American Legion and other military units.

F. D. Holds Parley With Budget Head

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 27 (AP)—Budget Director Harold D. Smith, upon arrival here today for a conference with President Roosevelt, asserted again that efforts were being made to whittle down substantially the government's expenditures for non-military activities.

"But," he added, "it is a whale of a job."

Smith carried a brief case containing the budgets for the Treasury and Justice departments and the Panama Canal. He said a presidential decision was necessary on the Treasury budget to prevent a week's delay in the work of the House appropriations sub-committee which handles the Treasury supply bill.

What the net result of the talk would be was uncertain, but the administration must add $500,000,000 to expenditures for defense and prune down other portions of the budget wherever it is feasible.

That the government will run "into the red" again appears certain. But Mr. Roosevelt had said there was a possibility, as compared with this year, of cutting the deficit in half.

To accomplish that result, he said, would require a new tax to finance the higher cost of defense. It would require, also, he asserted, a continuation of the present increase in federal tax receipts, budget reductions in non-defense items, and congressional adherence to whatever budget is submitted.

The budget will cover the year beginning next July 1. It will estimate for Congress how much the Administration believes the government must spend during the year and how much will tinkle into the Treasury's tills to foot the bills.

Harvard Youth Pays Auto Crash Fine

A 21-year-old Harvard business school student, operaor of a machine involved in a three-car crash in which he, his roommate and five other persons were injured, paid a $100 fine in East Cambridge district court today.

Clark Henderson of Washington, D. C., pleaded not guilty to charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, driving to endanger, and failing to slow down at an intersection.

Judge Arthur P. Stone found him guilty and fined him $75 on the first count, $25 on the second, and filed the third.

5 Night Clubs Face Probe in Revere

Operators of five Revere night clubs have been summoned to appear before the city licensing board at a Wednesday night hearing as the result of a tour of inspection made by Capt. William E. Tappan.

Tappan reported that he visited 12 clubs Sunday and found five of them open after hours.

19 Are Fined $87 For Sunday Gaming

Nineteen defendants seized in one of three raids and charged with being present at gaming on the Lord's day, today were fined a total of $87 by Judge John Duff in Central Municipal Court. The raids were made in the North End by Sergts. Francis McGeever and Coleman S. Joyce.

CHICKS DIE IN FIRE

NORWICH, Conn., Nov. 27—Nearly a thousand four-week-old chicks, poultry feed and equipment were destroyed here by a fire in a brooder house at the Norwich State Hospital.

MAN BURNED, 3 HURT IN ROXBURY

A Roxbury man was severely burned and three Boston firemen were less seriously injured today as a two-alarm fire swept a two-story brick block in Washington st., near Cliff st., Roxbury.

Robert Blumerfield, 28, and unmarried, of Malbon pl., Roxbury, was trapped in the Cormack Undertaking parlors where he was employed and badly burned about the face and body before being rescued.

At the Boston City Hospital, to which he was raced in police ambulance, his name was placed on the danger list.

Private Peter Cotter, 35, of Hemenway st., Boston, attached to Ladder 26, suffered a punctured left foot as he was fighting the flames. He was treated at the scene.

Joseph Murphy of Ladder 12 suffered burns of both hands, and Edwin Clark of Engine 12 was cut on the left hand.

Several other firemen were affected by the smoke, but were able to return to duty.

The fire, which caused damage estimated at about $7500, spread through a number of offices and storerooms in the block.

Bares Red 'Inroads' At Harvard, M.I.T.

By WILLIAM S. NEAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (INS)—The Dies committee today heard an investigator describe nation-wide organization work of Communists in universities and colleges—including Harvard—and a Columbia University professor tell of Communist control of the teachers' union.

Opening an extensive investigation of subversive influences in the educational field, the committee also was informed that representatives of the German government have sought to place pamphlets favorable to the Hitler regime in university libraries.

The witnesses were Maj. Hampden Wilson, former educator now employed by the committee, and Dr. George Hartman, Columbia University professor.

Maj. Wilson declared that the Communist efforts to penetrate American educational institutions has been so intense that funds have been supplied directly from Moscow. He charged the American Students Union with being the chief "transmission belt" for the Communist party in this connection.

Dr. Hartman, in a broad attack on the New York branch of the Teachers' Union, asserted, the organization's college news letter is "definitely under Stalinist control," and that the union's organ, The New York Teacher, had refused to publish articles criticizing the Communist "party line."

Greatest Communist strength among teachers is in New York, he said.

However, he added that The Philadelphia Teacher is definitely under Communist control and that Communism has made "some inroads" among professors in Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Maj. Wilson spent more than an hour summarizing the results of his eight months of inquiry.

"In practically every institution of higher learning and in many city high schools it was found that the American Student Union was the agency used in spreading Communism," the investigator declared.

"It has been the practice of the Communist party for several years to flood campuses and classrooms with bulletins carrying the title of the institution and thereunder showing that the document was issued by the Young Communist League unit of the college.

"These pamphlets carry news about the institution and many times contain severe criticisms of the administrative actions of authorities.

Mrs. F. D. Willing To Reply to Dies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (INS)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told her press conference today she would be glad to answer any questions put to her by Rep. Dies (D.) of Texas, chairman of the House committee investigating un-American activities.

"I would answer any question asked me in the interest of truth," Mrs. Roosevelt said.

CARDINAL OBSERVES 28TH ANNIVERSARY OF ELEVATION

With the simple dignity that has marked every occasion in which he has been the central figure, William Cardinal O'Connell today celebrated the 28th anniversary of his elevation to the College of Cardinals.

Scores of congratulatory messages arrived at his Commonwealth ave. home in Brighton from prominent clergy and statesmen throughout the world.

His Eminence celebrated his anniversary by saying mass in his private chapel and offering prayers of thanksgiving. He then repaired to the daily business of the archdiocese in his office, located in the Diocesan House, adjacent to his residence.

The lack of splendor in today's services, it was thought by members of his secretarial staff and household, would be duly compensated for on Dec 8, when the dean of the American hierarchy celebrates his 80th birthday.

HIS GREAT WORK HERE

Twenty-eight years ago today in the beautiful vestibule of St. Peter's in Rome, the red hat, symbolic of membership in the supreme senate of the Pope, was conferred upon Cardinal O'Connell by Pope Pius X.

Cardinal O'Connell's years as archbishop of Boston have been years of accomplishment both materially and spiritually. It was here that he proved himself a worthy administrator, for under his direction 125 new parishes have been erected, two colleges for women have been erected, Boston College has been enlarged, parochial schools have been built in large numbers and St. Elizabeth's hospital has undergone a complete reorganization.

Following his daily custom, His Eminence, accompanied by his secretary, Monsignor Jeremiah F. Minihan, and his pet dog, Marro, rounded out the day's activities by taking a long walk near the Cardinal's estate.

WARNS OF EVIL "QUACKS"

On the eve of his anniversary His Eminence addressed members of the Federated Catholic College Clubs in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, in which he urged his listeners to discard the fancies of "quacks" and teachings of pseudo-philosophers and hold fast to eternal teachings of the church.

"You are facing a future vague and unknown," the Cardinal said. "You are young and inexperienced, but you are devoting your time to the acquisition of learning, striving to get the best knowledge which will serve you in the future.

"Be on your guard against the fancies of quacks, especially in regard to materialistic doctrines. They won't stand the test of real learning. Most of them are novelties which will pass. Just wait eight, nine or ten years and they will be gone, unable to stand the test of time."

Dowd Must Face 2 More Indictments

around a polished bar which was erected by a county employe.

It was also learned that certain favored jail prisoners surrounded the festive bar on occasions. The bar was torn out, according to information given to the district attorney's office, when the Boston Bar Association began its probe.

Those questioned were George R. MacNeil, a carpenter; Frank Kerwin, James A. Sherlock, George A. Gannon, William A. Reardon and Frank Murphy, the last four all long-time courthouse employes.

CALL MORE WOMEN

Six more women employes were then questioned by the probers. They were Mrs. Mary Leahy, Mrs. Jennie Bragg, Mrs. Catherine Nagle, Mrs. Mary T. Boland, Mrs. Jennie E. Gainey and Mrs. Mary Feeney.

An additional probe into the purchase of water coolers for the courthouse was also started when City Auditor Charles J. Fox communicated with Secretary Robert E. Cuniff, of the Boston Finance Commission. The purchase of coolers, under a three-year-instalment plan, has been under scrutiny for the past week.

PLAN FOR REWARD

After a week-end of fruitless search for Dowd a move was launched today to offer a substantial reward for his capture. Fingerprints have been obtained from his service records at the War Department. They will be sent throughout the country.

A leading official, who asked that his name be withheld, said the city council would be asked to vote a "limit reward," an act unprecedented since the hunt for Oliver B. Garrett, vice squad czar, almost a decade ago.

The City Council, which serves as a board of county commissioners for Suffolk County, would have full jurisdiction in offering the reward for their one-time councillor, the official pointed out.

Leaders in the search feel Dowd's horse-playing habits have led him to one of the two major tracks now running in the East and South and every effort is being made to trap him there.

Dowd is believed to have had about $20,000 in cash in his flight from bribery indictments.

TIPS ON HORSES

Among other things the district attorney received records showing that telegrams containing "hot" tips on horses were sent from Dowd's office to the sheriff while he was attending race meets at Rockingham and Narragansett, the telegrams being paid for by the taxpayers.

According to information given the district attorney, it was learned, the money believed to be in Dowd's possession at the present time was obtained by cleaning out accounts in various banks in order to prevent attachment's by creditors.

It was learned that many of the jail officers who paid for their jobs, took the precaution to list the numbers of the bills they handed to the "bagmen."

As a result, numbers from nearly $4000 in $50 and $100 bills are in the hands of the district attorney, who was given a list of them to banks with the request that if any turn up either Foley or the police be notified.

OTHER WITNESSES

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle plans to question a large number of additional witnesses today and have some of them testify before the grand jury in the hope of obtaining more indictments against Dowd.

Among those to be questioned will be the balance of courthouse employes, including plumbers, janitors, matrons and others. Also Deputy Sheriff Harry I. Timilty, brother of Police Commr. Timilty, and Charles Leonard, who was appointed by Dowd as first assistant superintendent of the courthouse.

Open Memorial Drive Overpass Wednesday

The Memorial drive overpass at the Cambridge end of the Cottage Farm bridge will be formally opened Wednesday at 2:30 p. m., it was announced today by Eugene C. Hultman, chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission.

DELLA CARROLL
Defied Hitler

Della Carroll Back in Boston

Della Carroll, blonde starry-eyed dancer who finds dressing distressing, so much so that she just won't turn on her art when told to put on more clothes, is back in Boston today.

She will do her rose dance here. And it will be the same dance, she says, which caused Hitler to frown upon her lack of habiliments when he took over Vienna and the same dance which fell under the police nudity ban at the New York World's Fair.

Della just up and quit both times. She left Vienna and she left the Fair, where she was working in the Congress of Beauty.

U. S. Film Companies Protest Jap Seizures

TOKYO, Nov. 27 (AP)—Representatives of six American motion picture companies, accusing the Japanese government of discriminatory tactics and restraint of trade, asked United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew today to file a formal protest.

The companies—Warner, United Artists, Paramount, Fox, RKO and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—told Grew more than $1,500,000 in motion picture receipts were frozen in Japan by the government's refusal to grant permits for remittance and dozens of films were held without reason in Yokohama.

Infant Dead Despite Officers' Efforts

Despite every effort of Everett police, Arlene Shuiman, 3-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Shuiman of Francis st., Everett, died at Whidden Memorial Hospital from suffocation.

Patrolmen Edward Conley and Anthony Florentine raced to the home after the child was found unconscious in her crib. She was pronounced dead at the hospital, only a few blocks away.

Everett Wife Hurt in Crash

On her way home after driving her husband to work, a young Everett wife was injured today when her coupe and an El bus were in collision in Washington st., Somerville.

The victim, Mrs. Margaret Cooper, 25, of Hancock st., Everett, was taken to Central Hospital, Somerville, where doctors said she had a right leg injury, lacerations of face and lip and contusions and abrasions of knee and hip.

Bus Driver William Kirchner told police Mrs. Cooper's auto hit the rear of his machine when he stopped to let off passengers.

OLD AGE PENSION BENEFITS EXPLAINED

(Every person who has a Social Security account card has an interest in the new features of Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance which go into effect Jan. 1, 1940. For the benefit of the readers of the Boston Evening American the Boston office of the Social Security Board has supplied six brief articles each explaining one point of the new provisions. Following is the first of this series.)

Monthly old-age and survivors benefits first become payable in 1940, instead of 1942. The greatest importance of these benefits will be for:

1—The wage earner in business or industry who is now nearing or past age 65.

2—Close relatives of the wage earner who dies after 1939.

The different kinds of payments which can be made, beginning next years, are:

Retirement income monthly, for insured wage earner after age 65.

Separate payment for wife, monthly, of such wage earner after she is 65.

Separate monthly payment for dependent unmarried child of such wage earner under 18.

Benefit monthly for insured wage earner's widow while there are dependent children under 16.

Benefit every month for dependent child, unmarried and under 18, of deceased wage earner.

Monthly benefit for dependent parents, after 65, of wage earner leaving no widow or children.

Lump-sum if wage earner leaves no survivors entitled to monthly benefits.

(Tomorrow: Wage Earners Nearing or Past Age 65. For further information call or write the Social Security board office in Boston, Cambridge, Chelsea, Lynn, Malden, Salem, Quincy or Waltham.)

Thief Steals Car, $300 Cash

An auto thief today found the spot where Abraham Wheeler cached his money. As a result, Wheeler was out $300 he told Revere police.

Wheeler, vending machine representative, told officers he had parked his car in Ocean ave. while he was in a nearby restaurant.

The machine was later found abandoned about a mile and a half away by Patrolman Fred McDonough.

The rear end trunk was ripped open. Wheeler said the missing money had been taken from the trunk compartment.

A COUSIN'S GREETING—Arriving in Boston aboard the American export liner Excalibur, Heather Allen, 16, daughter of American consular agent (right), is greeted by her cousin, Phyllis Harty, 4. Miss Allen will visit her uncle at Marblehead with her sister, Rose, who arrived with her.

Wainscott, L. I., estate of wealthy and socially topnotch Mrs. Elwood Hendrick, long time friend of the Herrick parents.

Mrs. Hendrick said she was sorry, but Eileen wasn't with her. And furthermore she "couldn't" say where the girl might be.

OLD NURSE AIDS

But Mrs. Hendrick did relent so far as to admit that it was her auto and her chauffer that took Eileen from the New York hospital.

At the Hendrick estate, young Lowther also found an ally.

This was 70-year-old Nurse Nellie O'Connor, who cared for Eileen in babyhood and cared for Eileen's mother when the latter, too, was a child.

Usually an employe of the Herrick family, but "resting" today in the gardener's cottage at the Hendrick home, Nurse O'Connor said:

"The way my lovely Eileen has been treated in this affair is terrible. She's been almost a prisoner, just as Mr. Lowther told the court.

"The poor dear never knew how Mr. Lowther was feeling or what he was going to do. And all the time they were telling her those awful stories about him. It's a shame, so it is."

U. S. Official Tells Of Nazi War Plans

The German war machine is the "most magnificent fighting force in existence," according to a high American government official who arrived in Boston today as the American Export liner Excalibur docked at the Army Base.

The officer, who refused to allow his name to be used, continued that in the past 32 months, during which time he lived in Germany as an official observer, he saw no signs of internal dissension.

"There will be no major assaults by the Germans against the Maginot line or by the French against the Siegfried line in this war," he said.

"It would be suicide. The lines are so strong the cost would nullify the gains."

SEES ITALY IN WAR

Instead, attack will be launched through Belgium or Holland, he predicted.

Also on board were six Catholic priests, five of whom were en route to Chicago, one to Holy Cross in Worcester. One of the priests predicted that Italy would be at war by the spring—against Germany.

He, too, could not reveal his identity.

"Our order warned us to leave Rome," he explained. "Partly to make room for Polish priests who have nowhere else to go, and partly because the American consular service wants us to leave while we can.

"Italy will be in the war by the spring, and there will be dissension between the people, who are for the Allies, and government officials who are committed to their alliance with Hitler.

SAYS DUCE LOSING POWER

"Mussolini has lost a great deal of influence since he set himself up as the protector of Austria and then Germany took it. Italy was ready to join Germany last August, but King Victor Emmanuel threatened if that happened, he would abdicate.

"The Italian people don't think Il Duce is a god any more. They're taxed up to their ears and food is scarce."

PERSIAN FLIERS ARRIVE

Among the other 13 passengers who disembarked here from the crowded liner were three Persian military fliers, who denied they were in America to buy military airplanes for Persia, or any other country.

However, on hand to greet them was Samuel Erwin, representative of the Curtiss-Wright Co. He talked with them on the pier for an hour and a half before he drove them off in his car.

Huge Waste Charged on Hurricane Repair Jobs

tracting firm, and $348,607.52 for labor and materials used directly by the department.

The report charges the department failed to make an adequate check of the Foster company bills.

It states that many of the Foster bills bore "absolutely no approval and those that were approved bore the initials of the commissioner, who, because the department provided no adequate setup, could not have been in a position properly to approve such bills for payment."

CHARGE EXCESSIVE COSTS

The state auditor points out that no one in the department knows whether the workmen listed ever actually worked, or whether the tools and equipment billed for were ever used, or even delivered to the job.

The report said that in one particular instance the Foster company charged a gross cost of $2,081.71 per acre for clearing and logging 20 acres at Mount Grace, as compared to a cost of $37.04 an acre for similar work done at the Mt. Toby reservation, which work was done under direction of Massachusetts State college experts.

The auditor said, in forwarding a copy of the report to the attorney-general, that in his opinion much of the work done by the contracting firm was not provided for under the statute and that money paid for it could be recovered.

WASTE IS ALLEGED

Similar to reports which were followed by removals of James G. Reardon, commissioner of education and William F. Callahan, commissioner of public works, today's charges were embraced in a 137 page exhaustive study.

Wood charges the recommendations of local foresters and field men were ignored by the department head; that in many cases where local superintendents estimated no hurricane, or flood damage, or very little, the department head got huge sums for supposed hurricane and flood damage.

In several instances he charged that unnecessary bridges and dams had been erected by the Foster company with Dean's approval; that in one case a few days after the company had erected a bridge it was torn down and replaced by Public Works Department employes.

In another case, on the Mohawk trail, it was charged that a swimming pool was built under expensive winter conditions. In another case a local expert estimated the cost of constructing water holes at $25 each. The Foster company, the report said, charged more than $100 for these holes.

The report points out that Dean sent for the contracting firm Sept. 28, 1938, seven days after the hurricane had swept across the state. It points out that no records have been found to show that any other contractors were consulted or given the opportunity to make bids.

The Foster company, according to the report, was given the work of clearing the forests and making repairs without bidding, on a cost plus 20 per cent basis. Later the legislature reduced this to 10 per cent.

The report says the commissioner explained this by saying the Foster company was the only one equipped to do the work.

The report also compared the charges made for supervisory employes with the salaries paid supervisors in the State service.

A State employe in charge of the work done by the conservation department on the Mohawk trail, Windsor and Savoy State forests received $28.50 a week. He was in general charge of three seriously damaged forests, it states.

WORK LEFT UNFINISHED

The Foster company at Mohawk trail employed one and sometimes two superintendents at $75 to $85 a week.

Many of the Foster bills and other valuable records have been lost in the conservation department, Wood charged.

The Foster company in one case, according to the report, charged for installing cement culverts which were never placed.

In other cases they installed 30-inch culverts in place of smaller ones, which the auditor says can not be construed as "replacement work."

Much of the concrete culverts for which the State was charged still lie in the woods unused, according to Wood.

REPORT REVEALS RIOT

Some of the culverts were later put in by Civilian Conservation Corps workers. In some cases work started by the Foster company was finished by Works Progress Administration employes, the report says.

Details of a riot at the State forest in Leominster became known for the first time when the report was given to the Governor.

According to Wood the Foster company arrived on Oct. 20, 1938, with 250 men and about 20 trucks.

The men in charge were advised by department supervisors that there was sufficient work for only two trucks and not enough work for 100 men.

A riot started among the men who had expected to go to work, and State Police were called after an employe's car was overturned and sand poured into the radiator.

Despite the supervisor's insistence that there was not enough work or tools for even less than 100 men, the Foster company billed for 139 laborers on the 21st, 151 on the 22d, 124 on the 24th and 140 on the 25th.

Wood recommends that an adjustment of the charges made by the companies on these dates be made. The report also charges that much wood and many tools

DON'T SCRATCH, SOOTHE THE IRRITATION

Quick relief from the maddening itch of eczema, psoriasis, poison ivy, and irritation about the rectum or personal parts is obtained by applying Resinol Ointment. Leave it on over night. It lessens the desire to scratch, and eases the irritation.

The soothing effect of Resinol takes the sting from the irritated places and makes you more comfortable. The skin heals sooner, too, with the help of Resinol, as its oily base holds the medication in active contact with the tortured parts.

For gentle cleansing of irritated skin, Resinol Soap is excellent because it has no excess of free alkali and is so refreshing. Many nurses suggest and use Resinol Ointment and Soap—why don't you try them?

Buy at any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol. Dept. 85, Baltimore, Md.

were stolen at this forest, that the wood was cut in odd sizes and later had to be recut by the regular department maintenance men.

At October mountain in Lee a 20-foot cement wing wall, constructed by the Foster company has already been undermined and, according to the forest supervisor, will collapse in next spring's freshets.

In the same area a bridge constructed by the company washed out last spring and was replaced by the Civilian Conservation Corps, Wood said.

BRIDGES BUILT TWICE

The report says that the forest supervisor at October mountain in Lee has been in the conservation department for many years and before that was in the construction business.

He says, according to the report, that the work done by the Foster company at a cost of approximately $100,000 could have been done by him and employes at a cost of $40,000.

At this same mountain the company erected a bridge and a short while later the public works department ripped it down and erected a new one.

At Salisbury Beach, Supt Andrew J. Walsh made an original estimate of $1535 damage caused by wind and water.

The report declares that Dean, four days after Walsh made his report, sent an estimate of damage in the amount of $27,000. The Legislature granted him $15,000 for repair work there.

The expenditures in fish and game propagation work, as noted in the report have already had their repercussions among Massachusetts sportsmen who annually pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for hunting and fishing licenses.

The auditor says that although Dean received huge sums for replacement of game birds and fish allegedly lost in the hurricane and flood, in most cases they were never replaced, and $50,000 of the money appropriated for this work was turned over instead to the forestry division, under which the Foster company was operating.

LET FISH "STARVE"

One of the outstanding items shown in the report involves the fish hatchery at East Sandwich known to all trout fishermen. Here the superintendent reported no damage at all after the hurricane. The station was outside the hurricane area.

Dean, in his estimate of damage there as outlined before the committee on ways and means, reported loss of 10,000 rainbow trout and Atlantic salmon:

"Caused by loss of electric current with which to grind and mix sufficient food," the report said.

The report indicates that if such loss occurred it was because station attendants let the fish starve, but no restocking took place there.

At the Montague fish hatchery the superintendent estimated that $1000 would cover the loss. He believed about 3000 trout were lost and that some damage had been done to roofs and buildings.

STOCK NOT REPLACED

No restocking was mae, although Dean asked in his first estimate for $19,500. H asked for $6000, or the equivalent of 20,000 rainbow and brook trout for stock loss, and the remainder for reforestation equipment and buildings.

Although the Palmer fish hatchery was heavily damaged and 20,000 brook trout were lost because of flood conditions, no restocking took place.

The regular maintenance force augmented by additional help did the work, for which Dean asked an appropriation of $10,604.

The report says that department experts were never consulted as to estimates of cost, or as to work actually done.

RUSSELL A. WOOD

Commissioner Ernest J. Dean, who today drew the fire of State Auditor Russell A. Wood, has long been a colorful figure in state politics.

He was representative from the Chilmark district when appointed to head the conservation commission by Gov. James M. Curley, a Democrat, in 1936. Dean was a Republican.

Within a few days he was dropped from the powerful ways and means committee by present Gov. Saltonstall, who was then Speaker of the House.

The House had a Republican majority that year. The Speaker's action was considered a political spanking.

During his long term in the Legislature Dean had been an the forefront of all legislation pertaining to the preservation of wild life and provisions for sportsmen.

In 1931 he had sponsored a bill providing $124,700 with which to purchase public hunting lands where the poor sportsmen might enjoy the privileges of their more wealthy brethren.

A year ago he was the target for an attack by the Taxpayers' Association. As the result of hurricane and flood damages, and huge appropriations granted by the Legislature for work in his department, the probe, which ended today, was ordered by the governor.

Saw War Grief Kill Mother, Urge Peace

A Jamaica Plain woman who said her mother died of a broken heart, grieving over the death of her youngest son in France during the World War, today joined the National Legion of Mothers of America, in the nation-wide drive to keep the United States out of Europe's war.

Mrs. Mary J. Schneider of 366 Centre st., signed the following letter with her two sisters, Mrs. Marguerite Ferrick and Mrs. Helen Murphy:

"I wish to keep both of my sons from fighting on foreign soil. One of my sons is in the U. S. Navy. I saw my dear mother worry herself into an early grave over my youngest brother who died 'over there.' My sisters and I wish to pledge ourselves to the principles of the Legion of Mothers."

From distant Houlton, Me., near the Canadian border, Mrs. Helen P. Thibadeau writes:

"I have noted with interest the rapid growth of your organization. I would appreciate further information concerning it."

Mrs. Samuel S. Rigelhaupt, 56 Scott st., Pawtucket, R. I.:

"I am happy to sign the pledge. I have two sons of war age and I certainly don't want them to go across to fight. They are too dear to me."

Mrs. Mary A. Myers, 38 Third st., Pittsfield:

"I have a son, 21, who is in the National Guard. I don't want him or any other mother's son sent to fight other people's wars. I shall be glad to enroll members. Good luck in such an excellent cause. Can my daughters, 13 and 15, become members, too?"

The organizers regret that Mrs. Myers' daughters are too young to enroll, although they appreciate the thought. Membership is limited to women, married and unmarried, who are voters. But Mrs. Myers' daughters can help by distributing pledge cards.

The entire membership of a club of 100 Boston mothers joined the Legion of Mothers today, with the opening of the fifth week of the campaign which was marked by an increase in enthusiasm and recruiting.

HAS FIVE SONS

Mrs. Ella Scicchitano, 5 Allen st., Boston, writes:

"I am president of a Catholic organization consisting of 100 mothers, who endorse the Legion of Mothers and who are strongly opposed to having our sons sent to fight in a foreign country.

"I have five lovely boys, three of military age, and I am positive my sons will not be killed by Hitler or his Hitlerism unless he takes a notion to come over here, and then I'll help my sons to make mud pies of him or any other invading foe.

"Let American mothers fight to keep out of war, and we won't be looking forward to seeing our boys return broken in nerves and body. We want the United States to have the best youth in the world, in health and patriotism, and we can't have that if we permit them to be slaughtered on foreign soil, every 20 years.

"I pray that we will win our fight and that our President will heed the plea of the mothers of America."

SHE RECRUITS 500

Mrs. Albert W. Levis, of 30 Bellevue st., Dorchester, has recruited 500 Italian mothers, she reported yesterday.

The slogans of the Legion of Mothers are:

1—To oppose the sending of American troops to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a program of adequate national defense.

3—To combat all "isms" whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

Kindly sign name and address on pledge card and mail to Box 228, Boston, Mass.

Flood Control Dam Now Taking Shape

PITTSBURG, N. H., Nov.27—A large lake, covering 2000 acres and holding 30,000,000,000 gallons of water, is taking shape here as engineers put finishing touches on a large flood control dam started two years ago.

Already, the course of the Connecticut river has been changed.

MOTHER AND HER THREE SONS BURNED TO DEATH

SPOTSWOOD, N. J., Nov. 27 (AP)—a mother and three sons burned to death today when trapped by a fire in their home.

Mrs. Loretta Dougherty, 37, saved her five-months-old baby, Theodore, by throwing him into the arms of a neighbor outside the building. Her husband, Elwood, a WPA worker, and another son, Robert, nine, saved themselves by jumping from a bedroom window.

The three sons who died were Herbert, 17; Raymond, 15, and Walter, four.

NIGHT COUGHING CAN OFTEN BE PREVENTED

Your child's coughing at night—caused by throat "tickle" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold—can often be prevented by rubbing his throat and chest with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. VapoRub's swift poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation, clears air passages, tends to stop mouth breathing. This helps him relax into healing sleep. VICKS VAPORUB

Remind Europe Of War Debts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (INS)—Not unmindful of the irony attaching to their action, State Department officials today drafted formal notices reminding the various nations of Europe that payments on the old World War debt again come due Dec. 15.

For the sake of the record, England, France and other powers will be informed by the American government that the United States Treasury still holds foreign I. O. U.'s representing loans and interest totalling $14,100,000,000.

The reminders will be sent by the State Department to the diplomatic representatives of the debtor nations in Washington. As in previous years, the department expects polite replies acknowledging the indebtedness, but enclosing very little cash.

Only Finland, Hungary and Greece are expected to come through with actual payments

Berlin Backs Soviets In Finland Dispute

BERLIN, Nov. 27 (INS)—Official circles in Berlin said today the Reich indorsed the attitude of Russia in the Soviet dispute with Finland.

German sources emphasized the Moscow claim that England and France have encouraged the Finns to resist the Soviet territorial demands.

with personnel, have been offered for participation in the anti-mine warfare and will be moulded into a "trawler reserve," he said.

6 NEUTRALS PROTEST

Meanwhile, it was authoritatively indicated that King George's seizure order, which will be made public in tomorrow's London Gazette, will not be promulgated immediately. The Allies will wait until the interests of neutral nations, six of which have protested against the order, have been considered in all their aspects.

Official announcement was made today that another German vessel, the 3670-ton freighter Borkum, had gone down along with Allied and neutral shipping in the North Sea. A submarine attacked and set fire to the vessel, killing four German members of the crew, after the freighter had been captured by a British warship.

Few details were known about the loss of the Rawalpindi and the Pilsudski.

(A report, unconfirmed elsewhere, reached Copenhagen, stating that the Rawalpindi was sunk in a battle with a German pocket battleship in the Indian Ocean. This recalled recent reports that the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer had been operating off the East African coast.)

SWEDISH SHIP SUNK

In addition, the 6336-ton Swedish steamer Gustaf E. Reuter was sunk by a mine off eastern England and a Liverpool pilot boat was destroyed under similar circumstances with a lott of 23 lives.

The British freighter Stangate, 1289 tons, was damaged in a "collision" of southeastern England and was being beached at a British harbor.

The Pilsudski, flying the British flag as a cargo vessel, was the largest merchant ship sunk so far in the war. Two explosions believed to have been caused by striking a twin mine sent the 14,524-ton vessel to the bottom of the Irish sea early yesterday.

The British admiralty revealed no details of the loss of the auxiliary cruiser, withholding both the cause and scene of the disaster.

A British communique stated:

"The admiralty regrets to have to announce that the auxiliary cruiser, the former Peninsular and Oriental liner Rawalpindi, has been sunk. It is feared that all officers and men, with the exception of one officer and 16 men, were drowned."

Naval circles said a cruiser of the Rawalpindi type usually carries 300 officers and men. Thus it was assumed that 283 lost their lives.

Loss of life and injuries aboard the Gustaf E. Reuter were unknown, but a British trawler rescued 19 crew members.

171 PERSONS RESCUED

Many aboard the Pilsudski were injured, but the number of missing was held to seven due to the fact the ship took four hours to sink. British destroyers rescued 171 persons from the former Polish transatlantic liner.

Several survivors from the Pilsudski died after being carried ashore. These included the ship's master, Capt. Maneit Stankiewichz, who refused to leave the ship until all his men within sight were clear.

Then he jumped into the sea shouting:

"Long live Poland!"

He died from shock and exposure.

In addition, the sinking of the 1537-ton British freighter oHokwod Thursday was revealed when survivors were landed at a northeast coastal port.

REDS URGE BLOW AT FINLAND

MOSCOW, Nov. 27 (AP)—Soviet Russian troops in mass meetings following a "border incident" yesterday in which Finnish artillery allegedly killed or wounded 13 Red army soldiers, today urged the government to "adopt strictest measures."

The meetings were held as Moscow awaited an answer to an ultimatum-like note in which Russia demanded that Finland withdraw her border garrisons to prevent a repetition.

The press campaign against Finland was strikingly similar to that which preceded the invasion of Poland and no mention was made in the newspapers or over the radio of the denial issued in Helsinki that Finns had fired on the Russians.

Finland Pens 'No' To Russia's Demand

HELSINKI, Nov. 27 (AP)—Finland will refuse Soviet Russia's demand that Finnish troops be withdrawn from the common border of Leningrad, it appeared certain today from comment in government circles which suggested Russian forces themselves fall back.

The Cabinet discussed the demand this morning, and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko began immediately to draft an answer which may be presented today after Cabinet approval.

Despite the pressure implied in the note delivered yesterday to Finland's Moscow legation, a Finnish government spokesman chose to call it "a friendly proposal"—not an ultimatum.

He pointed out that the note carried no time limit. It called for withdrawal "without delay."

The spokesman said there would be an answer from the Helsinki government, which today studied the demand, but he insisted there would be no withdrawal of soldiers sent to the frontier during the fruitless negotiations, Oct. 7 to Nov 13, over Russian territorial demands.

DENY KILLING RUSSIANS

Premier Aimo K. Cajander flatly denied the Russian allegation that Finnish artillery fire yesterday killed four Russian soldiers and wounded nine—the immediate cited basis for the Russian demand that troops in the Karelian Isthmus be withdrawn to points from 12 to 16 miles from the border.

Government circles generally were skeptical over Moscow's allegation of an artillery attack. They suggested that a better way to avert any further incidents would be withdrawal by the Russians themselves.

The sudden sharpening of relations between Russia and Finland, herself once part of imperial Russia, came just as Finns were beginning to settle down to normal life with the relaxation of black-out restrictions and the reopening of schools.

Statistics on Finland's military strength from the best available sources indicate that while the little Baltic country might be able temporarily to hold off Russian invasion by land she would fall quick prey to an assault from the sea and by air.

At best, Finland could mobilize an army of about 600,000 men, about half of whom would be trained and fairly well equipped. Entrenched in the rough north country along the Russian-Finnish border, this force might prove a formidable obstacle to an invading army, particularly in the winter months, when the weather would hinder modern mechanized units.

Hemmed in on two sides by water (the gulf of Finland and the gulf of Bothnia), Finland would present a vulnerable naval and aerial target for the U. S. S. R., which, through treaties with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, has arranged to establish naval aid air bases on the gulf of Finland and the Baltic.

Against a powerful array of Russian battleships, cruisers and scores of submarines Finland could muster only two small coast defense vessels, five submarines, six gunboats, 21 mine sweepers, six mine layers and nineteen patrol boats.

The Russian naval force striking across the Gulf of Finland, say some observers, quickly could take Helsinki, Finnish capital.

It is in the air where Russia would enjoy the greatest superiority.

Finland has only a handful of military airplanes, most of them obsolete, the authoritative "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" reports.

Russia has one of the world's largest air forces and thousands of trained pilots.

3 Fishermen Safe After Sloop Sinks

GAY HEAD, Nov. 27—Three fishermen were safe in Martha's Vineyard today after a five-mile row in rough seas, to No Man's Land, an island south of here, but they were minus their fishing sloop and a catch of 15,000 yellowtails.

The three—Parish Selig, his son Gilbert and Simon Boutillier of New Bedford—said their sloop, the Mary G. 2d, of New Bedford sprang a leak and foundered in a gale Friday night, forcing them to take to their dory.

Astonishing Way to Relieve Raw Throat from a Cold in a Hurry

Follow easy steps in pictures below . . . But be sure you use fast-acting Bayer Aspirin

To relieve sore throat from cold, crush and stir 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water until completely dissolved.
Gargle thoroughly. Tilt head way back to get full benefit from the Aspirin solution. This eases soreness in a hurry.
Check temperature. If you have a fever and temperature does not go down—if throat pain is not quickly relieved, call your doctor.

No strong medicines to upset system . . . the modern method that acts with amazing speed.

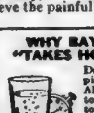
If your throat shows signs of rawness from a cold, follow the directions the pictures here illustrate. No strong medicines are needed with this simple modern way . . . Thousands of doctors advise it as the effective, sensible method of quick relief for their patients to use.

The Bayer gargle will amaze you. In a short time, it will ease throat rawness and soreness wonderfully. Take Bayer Aspirin internally, of course, to quickly relieve the painful body symptoms of your cold—headaches, muscular discomfort.

See Your Doctor. Even though he may wholeheartedly approve using Bayer Aspirin to relieve painful symptoms, you should not fail to see your family physician, because many colds may lead to serious consequences.

Try it. Always ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name (not for just "aspirin"). See that you get it. The Bayer cross stamped on every tablet is your safeguard.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN "TAKES HOLD" SO FAST



Drop a genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablet in water. Almost instantly it starts to disintegrate—is ready to go to work. Make this test, and see for yourself why Bayer Aspirin acts so quickly!

British Claim Another U-Boat

LONDON, Nov. 27 (INS)—The German submarine which torpedoed the British steamer Pensilva Nov. 19 was destroyed by depth charges dropped by British destroyers, members of the Pensilva's crew reported today upon landing at Cardiff, Wales.

The survivors said that the U-boat fired a shot across the Pensilva's bows halting the vessel. After the crew had taken to lifeboats, the submarine sent a torpedo crashing into the vessel's hull.

Thinks Nazi Mines Break, Then Strike

By CAPT. JOHN H. CRAIGE
U. S. Marine Corps, Retired
Written Especially for International News Service

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (INS)—While Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain announced yesterday in a radio address that the British admiralty had solved the mystery of Germany's mine-torpedo war on English shipping, the Nazi countered by sinking the huge liners Pilsudski and Rawalpindi as well as some lesser vessels for the most successful day of their mystery-war thus far.

Chamberlain said that apparently a magnetic mine is doing the sinkings, assured his listeners that study by British naval experts had made its nature an open book, and that armed with this knowledge, England's navy will be able to make a quick end to the unprecedented success that has attended the Nazi commerce-destroying campaign of the past few days.

Speculation in naval circles here and abroad about the mines continues rife. Many ingenius theories have been evolved, and naval records of past inventions are being overhauled to furnish hints as to the nature of the new Nazi sea menace.

A theory quoted by a famous British naval expert is to the effect that the mines are spherical in shape and cannot be picked up by mine-sweepers.

Half the mine, according to this report, consists of anchor, half of explosive.

After being sowed it lies on the bottom until a steel ship comes along. Then the electrical releasing device functions, the sphere breaks in half, the anchor half staying on the bottom and the explosive half bobbing to the surface like a cork to explode against the bottom of the vessel.

Another object of speculation is the so-called Leon mine. Evolved by an ingenious American inventor and tried out by the U. S. navy, this alternately sinks to the bottom, then rises to the top of the water in response to the functioning of inner machinery. The Leon mine also is without anchor-cable or other projections and cannot be caught by the mine-sweeping gear at present in use.

Blast on British Ship Reported

Capt. Ake Rodhe of the Swedish freighter Monark docked his ship at Charlestown today with reports, unconfirmed, of a gun explosion aboard the British cruiser Repulse and the wounding of a number of British sailors.

Capt. Rodhe said rumors had it that the British ship put in at Halifax, Nova Scotia, with wounded men. The reports, he said, were running the rounds of the waterfront at Louisburg, N. S., where the Swedish freighter had stopped.

Aboard the freighter was a lone passenger, Sven Sandberg, agent for a mink farm in Sweden, who plans to purchase 300 live mink in Canada for breeding purposes.

Britain Takes Over Big Canadian Liner

SHANGHAI, Nov. 27 (AP)—The British Admiralty has commandeered the 21,517-ton Canadian Pacific passenger liner Empress of Canada, it was stated here today.

No details were announced. The liner, built in 1922, is at Hongkong.

DUTCH ACT TO OFFSET 2 PERILS

By J. T. JESSERUN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27—Subjected to both Allied and German pressure, the Netherlands moved today toward a possible reorganization of the government in order to maintain Dutch neutrality under increasing difficulties.

Liberals initiated a vigorous movement for formation of a stronger government to succeed the stop-gap three-party cabinet now led by D. J. De Geer.

Return of Hendrikus Colijn, Dutch "strong man," to cabinet leadership, with the task of maintaining the Netherlands' independence as well as neutrality, was foreseen.

COUNT ON U. S. BACKING

Authorities in Amsterdam expressed the belief America feels sympathy for the Dutch in their present troubles and will give them moral support.

Britain is accused of asking impossible concessions which, it was said, would kill Dutch export trade.

On the other hand, the Germans have aroused tremendous antipathy here through torpedoing the Dutch tanker Sliedrecht without—it was said—even rescuing the crew. Dutch newspapers called the incident "barbaric."

In addition, the frontier incident of Nov. 9, in which one Dutch official was killed and several persons allegedly were carried across the Reich frontier by Germans, has excited the populace.

WARNS BRITAIN, TOO

The Netherlands, this correspondent was informed on high authority, can never accept foreign control over her trade with the Dutch colonies. This, it was emphasized, is purely a national affair, and the only control the British may ask is a certificate of origin for goods going from Holland to the United Kingdom.

If England should seek to control ships plying between the Netherlands and other neutral nations, it was warned, serious trouble might arise.

Japanese Forces Push on from Nanning

HONGKONG, Nov. 27 (AP)—Japanese reported today their forces had pushed on from Nanning toward another important Chinese base, while defense commanders indirectly acknowledged loss of the Kwangsi province capital.

The new objective of the Japanese offensive against Chinese "lifelines" in southwest China was not identified.

SPEEDERS TO LOSE LICENSES

Wholesale suspension of motorists' licenses was promised today by State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin because of "a week-end slaughter on our highways."

"Beginning today," said Goodwin, "any persons reported to me as going faster than 45 miles an hour at night or at a dangerous rate of speed in any congested area will lose their licenses, and no 'pull' or politics will affect the suspension.

"The loss of a license to many means the loss of the right to earn a living, but if drivers of cars persist in endangering the lives of others, they must expect the punishment that is coming to them.

"Wholesale suspensions must be expected in the immediate future of all those speeding and all those driving after drinking."

The registrar said that over the week-end 12 persons were killed in Massachusetts, the lowest record for the entire year over a week-end. Of these 10 were killed at night and two in the daytime. Nine of the 12 were pedestrians.

PLUG IN TO BETTER LIVING

FIRING SQUAD AT DAWN

by PAUL WHELTON

IF there had been no World War, if the grey-clad German horde had not swept over Belgium and if one Belgian had not, in his makeup, more than sufficient moral courage to make up for his lack in physical proportions—then the world might never have heard of Eugene van Doren.

Obscure journalist, flaming patriot, shrewd, ingenious opportunist, this small, slim and slippery Belgian did more during the war to bolster the spirits of his oppressed people and to harass the haughty Prussian invaders than any other single individual of his plucky nation.

M. Eugene van Doren was in no sense a spy, although through his organization, and the individuals in it, espionage was carried on and important military information furnished the Allies chiefly the British and the French agents.

His personal master was of a different type and though it is the Venner parliament he served before the German High Command and hunted to death Baron Moritz Ferdinand von Bissing, German general commanding conquered Belgium, in the condition described as "fit to be tied."

One of the great mysteries of the war was the continual, even if irregular appearance of a strange publication which excoriated and ridiculed the Belgian invaders and defied them to do their worst.

Not until after the war was it revealed that Eugene van Doren was the man responsible for the patriotic Belgian publication printed under the very nose of General von Bissing and copies of it literally forced into his pudgy and rage-shaken hands.

A reward was offered to him who would disclose the identity of the editor or the office of the publication. There was no taker. The reward was increased, then doubled and redoubled, until it reached the sum of 100,000 francs.

There was a standing order that Germany's counter-espionage agents, who were thick as a rabbit breed in occupied Belgium, were to track down the culprits and halt the pestiferous publication—but the order went in vain.

WHEN the Germans took possession of Belgium, all newspapers, knowing they would become mere Boche mouthpieces, suspended publication.

Then, almost magically, the first issue of the mysterious, pirated Free Belgium, appeared and a copy was left in the night on the doorstep of Baron von Bissing's residence.

It was the first step in an amazing campaign of which the world has had no equal and it brought an immediate flood of rage from Von Bissing who ordered that the editors and publishers should be arrested and brought to his presence.

It was the whistling joke of the world. Nothing happens and the Germans betray their great lack of saving sense of humor as they read this first issue.

It was the announcement which stated that the publication was "a bulletin of patriotic propaganda, regularly irregular, submitting to absolutely no censorship."

Head and front of the daring venture was Jean Allaer, the young Belgian journalist and his chief aides on the staff of clever writers and artists were Victor Jourdain and M. van de Kerckove—although none of these identities came out until after the war.

In the first number also was something that the German officials would have given almost anything to suppress, an article truly described in the issue as the "magnificent pastoral letter of Cardinal Mercier on Patriotism and Endurance."

With an aim toward reducing weight and bulk as much as possible, issues of Free Belgium were printed on "silk paper," light and thin, but tough, making it possible for one man to carry as many as 4000 copies for distribution.

In fact one agent, Louis Allaer, had exactly this number in an inconspicuous appearing box one day while the Germans were frantically endeavoring to track down the perpetrators.

THE box was heavy of course—4000 units of anything are heavy. Allaer was straining to lift the box up on his shoulder. A German soldier obligingly stepped forward and aided. Allaer thanked him courteously and walked away, his heart hammering and not accelerated by his exertions.

Hardly had the regular newspapers closed down in Belgium with the invasion of the country by Germany than Eugene van Doren conceived his idea for Free Belgium.

He conferred with Victor Jourdain, who became an eager conspirator, and Jourdain, better fixed for ready funds, dug down and purchased a foot-power press which was installed at Molenbeck, a suburb of Brussels, in an outbuilding of a small factory belonging to Van Doren.

At Woluwe another small establishment to set up the paper was established secretly, and it was Van Doren himself who acted as courier between the two plants, carrying type in two little cases which, although small, weighed heavily.

Van Doren's wife assisted him in placing some of the copies in envelopes for distribution. Other copies were left secretly for members of the Senate and House of Representatives and were placed on doorsteps of enraged German officials in the dead of night.

Every precaution was used to protect the authors of the witty and sometimes scintillating articles contributed to the newspaper. The manuscripts, after being put into type, were destroyed and the ashes scattered.

Originals of cartoons, after being transferred to the metal, met with the same treatment lest they carry some mark that might identify the artist.

CARDINAL MERCIER
Loyal Belgian Patriot

In this message Cardinal Mercier bade his countrymen to obey their conquerors in things that were lawful but never to consume that they were anything but Belgians, and always to stand loyally by their king.

As distribution of the issues grew more difficult with the mounting circulation—the copies were free but the demand for them grew greater and greater—another ardent Belgian patriot came into the fold.

He was Philipe Baucq, architect and engineer who already was aiding Nurse Edith Cavell of Brussels in forwarding soldiers and refugees into Holland and who was to face a firing squad, with her, as a result of those activities.

On some nights, Baucq would distribute 4000 to 5000 copies, riding long distances on his bicycle, and later, when bicycling was forbidden, carrying out the circulation mission on foot.

VAN DOREN himself took care of the bulk of the other circulation, the instigator conveying large bundles to the distribution points and the Belgian populace calling secretly and taking from one to a half dozen or a dozen copies to spread around.

When one particular issue of Free Belgium came out, so great was the demand that people literally tore copies of the paper out of each other's hands on the street.

This issue carried a cartoon of General von Bissing, seated at his official desk in the palace and reading a copy of Free Belgium.

Similar street scenes throughout Belgium were enacted when another issue of the paper carried a cartoon depicting Von Bissing bowed down under the weight of a stack of search warrants against Free Belgium.

Angry messages were coming through to Von Bissing from the High Command in Berlin, and the almost choleric governor, who had retired as a full general in 1908 but had been recalled at the outbreak of the war, raised the reward offer to 100,000 francs.

There still were no takers and the doughty general must have felt baffled indeed when the Secret Police, just as frantic, had to continue their reports that they could learn nothing.

One of the many scares suffered by the patriots was on an occasion when Secret Police suddenly visited the home of Mme. Massuide, wife of a bookseller of the Galeries Saint-Hubert, who served as the intermediary for the copy.

As a result of this visit and search, which disclosed nothing and left the German agents as baffled as ever, the printer employed became nervous and quit.

The copy for the next number was received at the shop, and instead of running the danger of keeping it there while another printer was secured, it was determined that it should be destroyed, which was done.

After some careful searching around, the Louis Allaer who later was to be aided by the helpful German in raising a box of 4000 copies to shoulder, was recruited as printer by another member of the newspaper conspiracy, M. the Abbe Demeer.

The only condition Allaer made on taking the dangerous job was that the copies of the paper should be snaked out of his shop, as soon as printed, and delivered to van Doren outside.

Even this precaution did not suffice. Printers everywhere were being checked, irregularly but often, in the hope that some haphazard visit would bring a bit of evidence under the Secret Police eye.

Van Doren determined to release Allaer to deliveries and to do the composing in the van Doren home, as the penalty for a circulator, if caught, probably would be considerably less than that imposed against a printer, or principal.

TAKING another risk himself, and in protection of the others, van Doren personally bought new material for the plant in his home in the Avenue Verte at Woluwe, where the paper was set. The machine was bought and carried piece by piece through the streets, a method which attracted no attention.

The German agents of counter-espionage were getting hotter and hotter on the trail, however. They suspected, and with good reason, that there was considerable information trickling to the enemy through agents of the newspaper.

On the occasion of the Belgian national holiday, Free Belgium summoned the people of Brussels to meet at Saint-Gudule. It was an amazing manifestation of patriotism by a populace long ground under the Prussian heel and with the oppressors still in command.

From among those present, however, in leading capacities, the Secret Police got their first real hint of identities behind Free Belgium.

It became necessary for the conspiring journalists to break up the plant in great haste and the material was carried to the house of a friend of Baucq, in the Rue d'Arlon, at Brussels.

These tribulations, however, did not discourage the blithe M. van Doren, and the paper continued to come out and discomfort the Boche.

The book, "J'Accusee," had just been published in Switzerland, and van Doren determined to publish it serially in Free Belgium. In the 50th issue of the paper, the serialization began. Thousands of copies were printed and distributed.

Several circulators were arrested, but all had been pledged to silence, and van Doren and his associates did not worry too much. Searching of homes became more frequent.

In the face of all this, van Doren went a step further and launched an illustrated paper entitled La Cravache (The Whip) in which the attacks on the Germans were even more bitter, more satirical and more humiliating. Of the first issue, 10,000 copies were printed and distributed free of charge to the recipients—including von Bissing.

Then word sped to Van Doren that at last his identity was known and Secret Police were on the way to arrest him. There was not even time for a hurried conference with his associates.

The editor fled to the home of an obscure relative, and shifted from there to the protection of friends in Brussels, where he remained for several months, laughing at the searches of police.

If the German agents had hoped Van Doren's vanishing meant the end of the paper, they were mistaken. It continued to come out as before, thanks to the devotion of the faithful Belgians he had gathered around him at the outset.

The arrests became more frequent. Circulators risked their liberty every time they picked up a bundle of the papers, but they shrugged off the danger and carried on.

AMONG them were printers, bankers, merchants, priests, lawyers, clerks, doctors and politicians, and although out of their ranks might drop a man now and another man then, through arrest, the others closed the ranks and continued.

Never throughout the entire German occupation did the Boche succeed in halting the appearance of the paper, although delay an issue here and there they might have been able to do.

He wore no uniform, he went without public acclaim, there were no medals hanging from his breast during the war, but Eugene van Doren was a hero of Belgium as much as any who wore a uniform openly.

His reward of fame came after the cessation of hostilities, when the whole story could be revealed.

And Eugene van Doren came to hold a place on a level with King Albert and Cardinal Mercier among those who had aided the cause of little Belgium's freedom and civilization.

KING GEORGE in his statement ending the present session of Parliament said that in this war "we seek no material gain."

That is largely true and England will certainly get no material gain.

The war, according to Sir John Simon, is costing England twenty-five million dollars a day now, and it has not really begun yet.

KING GEORGE
"No Material Gain"

Added to this direct cost of the war is the cost of the destruction created by war.

Added to these purely material costs are the eventual loss of England's best young manhood and the loss of the wealth which they, by their labors, would have created in peaceful pursuits.

And these losses which England will sustain, other nations in the war will similarly sustain, and indeed the world will eventually suffer from.

Would it not be better to secure peace and turn from destruction to productivity, from poverty to wealth, from misery to happiness?

King George goes on to relate the high principles and objectives for which his country is fighting.

Undoubtedly this is true, too. But every people believe they are fighting for high principles.

Every country believes that God is on its side in war.

Still God appears to be on the side of peace rather than war for he blesses those peoples who remain at peace and sorely afflicts those who go to war.

IT IS NOT TOO LATE to secure for the conflicting nations the benefits and blessings of peace.

It is not too late to avoid the destruction and affliction of war.

It is not too late for the warring nations to accept the mediation of Holland and Belgium, and Norway and Sweden, and Denmark and Rumania, and Italy and Spain, and the various neutral nations, and secure a just and permanent peace.

All nations know that the Treaty of Versailles did not secure a permanent peace and all nations know why.

In the light of that knowledge and in view of the useless cost and suffering of a protracted war, another and better effort should be made for a long and perhaps a permanent peace.

Civilization advances during peace, and unless war destroys civilization, civilization will eventually destroy war.

SUNSPOTS CONTINUE to interest science. In a report from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dr. Harlan T. Stetson disputes the accepted notion that there is a cycle of these mysterious solar "blackouts" after each eleven years and two months.

The most recent cycle of highest sunspot activity was only nine years, Dr. Stetson points out.

He also shows that radio broadcasts can detect electrical, magnetic temperature and other changes caused in the upper atmosphere by disturbances on Old Sol.

These discoveries may have an important influence on human health. It has been long recognized that deaths from tuberculosis, meningitis and fevers tend to increase during periods of great sunspot energy.

Perhaps now, as men, equipped with the marvelous instruments of Twentieth Century science, acquire more information about the sun, ultimate controller of our lives and all earthly happenings, millions of persons hitherto doomed may be spared.

RENO DIVORCES, often in the news, gain new prominence as the result of the opinion of a New Hampshire Superior Court justice who holds that a Nevada decree obtained by a Manchester official is invalid.

In Nevada a divorce can be granted to a person who has resided in the State only six weeks.

Thirty-two States, including New Hampshire, require a residence of at least a year. Eight States insist upon two years. Connecticut demands three years. And Massachusetts, most severe in this respect, five years.

There is also a great difference in the grounds upon which divorces are allowed. Kentucky has 14 and allows both parties to remarry immediately. Massachusetts has eight; New York, one.

This confusion has given rise in recent years to a growing demand for more uniform divorce and separation legislation throughout the country.

The Golden City

CLOUD curtains parted as upon a stage . . . revealing, over earth's rim to the west . . . a scene projected from the Golden Age . . . a city fair in gala splendor dressed.

I saw the towers and minarets unfold . . . the bulging domes—and they were all of gold . . . I saw a myriad gonfalons unfurl . . . bannering bright a boulevard of pearl . . . down which rode golden kings in golden cars . . . each drawn by snow-white unicorns that pranced . . . while, in spice-laden, rainbow-hued bazaars . . . golden-tressed slave-girls, silver-sandaled, danced.

The wonder-city vanished into air . . . Not a mirage—I know that it was there.

Human Side of News -:- By EDWIN C. HILL

JUSTICE CUFF of the New York Supreme Court wants lawyers to "create a fine appearance." He is concerned because they "look no different from anyone else in the courtroom," and therefore have "suffered a distinct loss in standing in the estimation of the public by that change."

It seems reasonable. Dressing the part is certainly important if one hopes to be a stand-out these days. But there are certain tricky questions involved. Justice Cuff would be sustained in his views if we put in evidence the impeccable and outstanding Sam Untermeyer, who used to show up in court with a fresh orchid in his coat lapel.

But the opposition could counter with the late Clarence Darrow, wearing a wrinkled ready-made suit, snapping his red suspenders to emphasize a point, slouching in his chair, ambling about the courtroom, hunching up his shoulders in a way to give a good tailor a nervous breakdown. He got big results, too.

ONE of George Ade's fables would do for an exhibit for Justice Cuff's case. Press time is near and the book isn't at hand, so we can only cite it from memory.

In the Siwash law school, there was a student who not only was a runt but a grouch. He was the poorest mixer and the hardest worker in the school and, naturally, took all the top honors when they dealt out the diplomas.

LATE CLARENCE DARROW
Clothing Didn't Matter

Twenty years passed. The little whiz-bang lawyer was known by his colleagues as one of the greatest living compendiums of Blackstone. But he was cranky in the courtroom and they used to call him "old slackpants." He got professional esteem but few clients.

One day when he was gloomily studying the cobwebs over his office door, a big, handsome man, of most imposing dignity came in.

It was Joe Goofus, who had been one of his old Siwash classmates. Joe had gathered many extra-curricular honors, but his head was as empty as Death Valley. He barely squeezed through at the foot of the class. On this occasion he was dressed in a manner to delight Justice Cuff. He was selling law books. They talked over old times and then Joe sprang a great idea. The crabby little man took notice.

The next time the little man had a case in court, he briefly attended to the kick off and then announced that the case would be presented by his eminent associate counsel, Mr. Joseph Worthington Goofus.

JOE has not only his Daniel Webster front and his magnificent tailoring, but a rolling, orotund, tear-jerking voice. The little man attended to all the brainwork and Joe managed the showmanship. Naturally they cleaned up. It was the beginning of a beautiful partnership.

There's a case in point, but it seems to me that the argument is still open. Would Sam Untermeyer have been Sam Untermeyer and no other, in a nine-dollar rumpled suit? And would Clarence Darrow have remained Clarence Darrow in a Bond Street disguise?

However there are few Darrows and few Untermeyers. Perhaps Justice Cuff was just talking to all the rest of us.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 27 —Another lovely day. Shortly, we are going with the President to inspect the new school building and the new infirmary, where the patients needing hospital care are housed. Henry Toombs, architect for all the buildings here, must be proud of his latest achievements, for everyone who has seen them is so pleased with them.

THE OTHER DAY, in New York City, a most interesting woman, Miss Rachel Davis Dubois, came to see me. She, being a Quaker, decided 12 years ago that there was something wrong when children in her classes, because of their different racial and religious backgrounds, were made unhappy.

She determined to find out how to correct adolescent persecution, and to foster understanding and appreciation among "the various cultural groups in the United States by showing how all the groups had helped to make our country what it is."

The first recognition of the Service Bureau for Intercultural Education has led to many things. Lately they have been asked by the Board of Education in New York City to introduce practical steps in the board's plan for teaching the children tolerance and democracy.

The beginning in New York City is pointing the way for other school systems throughout the country to do similar work.

PRESIDENT TAKES THE WHEEL AT WARM SPRINGS
Basil O'Connor, Thomas Qualters, Miss Margaret LeHand and Mrs. Roosevelt Are Passengers

The first step, of course, is to reach the teachers and through them to capture the children's imagination. To do that, all modern progressive methods are being used. Radio scripts and dramatic episodes are being published by the bureau and even television will soon be called upon to contribute to this form of education.

The United States Department of Education, with the cooperation of the Service Bureau for Intercultural Education, put on a most interesting radio series last winter called: "Americans All, Immigrants All," which won the annual award of the Women's National Radio Committee as the most original program for 1938-1939.

The work of this committee is proceeding on constantly new and interesting lines which ought to help all of us to a greater appreciation of our democracy and fundamental principles which enter into its preservation.

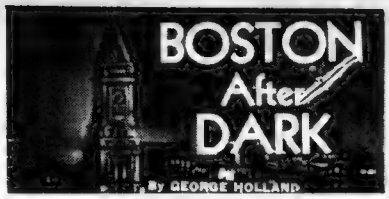
Zoe Akins, whose "Old Maid" won the Pulitzer Prize, will write the adaptation.



MONDAY MORNING MUSINGS: If investigation proves that there is no such gentleman as "J. J. Booge" in this vicinity, one sleuth working on the affair O'Hare believes that the "o," the "g" and the "e" of the signature may prove helpful . . . "Booge" sent a telegram, received by the Dighton track operator just before he died, in which "Booge" said he had information for O'Hare . . . You may be sure that persuasion will be used by Governor Saltonstall in an effort to have Harold W. Pierce accept reappointment to the racing commission.

THE PIERCE TERM expires Friday . . . Commissioner Pierce has been named president of the United States Golf Association, and golf is his first love . . . The new job will require considerable work . . . One of the most distinguished gentlemen in the state's service, the Brookline man devoted a year to getting his bearings . . . They say he has 'em now, and that the administration was depending on him greatly . . . O'Hare's demise will result inevitably in major changes in the local racing situation, according to sources close to Governor Saltonstall.

SPEAKING OF THE GOVERNOR there was an interesting exchange of amenities between him and Ruby Newman, the Boston bandleader . . . The two met at the reception and dinner tendered the Guv by the Insurance society at the Statler . . . "Prosperity must have struck the insurance business, Ruby," the Governor said, "else the boys would not have been able to hire you and your band." "It wasn't that, Your Excellency," was Maestro Newman's reply. "The society felt that the best was none too good for a governor like you." . . . I guess to be a successful maestro, a certain amount of self-appreciation is necessary.

GRANTING THAT THIS BE SO, Mickey Alpert has reason this Monday morning to muse about his own importance, and call himself pretty good, too . . . And not only as a bandleader . . . His first-fiddler and associate leader, Bernardo Fazioli, can share in the bows too . . . The two boys have had another song accepted by a bigtime music publisher . . . Professional copies are being distributed . . . The song is "Dream Shadows" . . . A few months ago this column reported that Jack Robbins had heard it and was impressed . . . Frequently, that is the extent of a song's career after a visiting song-publisher finishes the usual routine of praising a band-leader's creation . . .

THE ALPERT-FAZIOLI CASE is different . . . Robbins really liked the song, apparently, and assigned Harold Adamson, a Class AA lyric-writer—and lately the writing-partner of Jimmy McHugh—to write a lyric for "Dream Shadows" . . . Moreover, orders have gone out to "plug" the number . . . The "break" is an important one to both Boston boys . . . It comes just as another song written by Mickey and two Fazioli's —Caesar is the other—is rising to national prominence . . . That would be their "Parade of White Mice" . . .

NEXT MARY MARTIN TO BE 'MIAMI'

By Louella O. Parsons

Mary Martin

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 27—Paramount reserved a seat on every plane flying West Sunday, so if at the last minute Mary Martin could leave her show "Goin' Places" she could get to Hollywood for the preview of "The Great Victor Herbert." But as one "trouper" to another—I'm betting Mary doesn't make it. Be that as it may—Para isn't waiting until after the preview to announce the next Mary Martin picture will be "Miami," an ultra modern and sophisticated musical, in contrast to the old-fashioned "Victor Herbert." It was Mary herself who requested the modern setting. She made her big hit singing "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" on Broadway and she's anxious to get back to the modern mood. Interesting that the idea for "Miami" is based on a song Bill Leberon (who will produce) wrote several years ago titled "Miami Shore."

CHARLES BOYER and Pat Paterson trained into Los Angeles Sunday afternoon where they were met by Tyrone Power, Annabella and a whole raft of reporters. After Charles explained that he had been released from the French army and that he had no intention of making propaganda films, the four made a dash for Ty's car. Ty and Annabella invited the Boyers to be their house guests until their own home, now rented, is available.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD AND PHILADELPHIA: Harry Richman, playing at Philadelphia's Walton Roof to huge crowds, introduced our little crowd; George Lamaze is now head of the Warwick and if we don't put on pounds it won't be his fault, what with midnight lunches sent to our rooms and hampers for the theater. Carl, the chef, personally served us eggs Lamaze, concoction of eggs, tomatoes, chicken, tongue and mushrooms; Herb Hagenor's orchestra met us on our return.

ONE OF THE FIRST people to telephone me in Philadelphia was Mickey Rooney's aunt; Mike Romanoff presented his credentials and walked in; Tilly Losch, now the Countess of Carnaron, is coming back to Hollywood to spend the Christmas holidays with her mother. Tilly and her wealthy fifth husband have turned over their home to forty evacuated children; Mary Rogers and Bruce Cabot dancing together at the Beverly-Wilshire; Miriam Hopkins taking her secretary night clubbing; Ann Sheridan and Jean Negulesco an item at the Victor Hugo.

DAILY STORY — A Crazy World

THE OLDER MAN tugged at the greasy coat sleeve of his younger companion and pulled him toward the fire, nearer the small group gathered in the "jungle" underneath one end of the North Bridge. He whispered through a stringy mustache and his eyes, small and red rimmed, crinkled in unpleasant amusement.

"Look at 'im. He's off again. Get this. It's wunerful. Archie Paderooski we calls 'im. Get 'im started an' it's some fun, bo."

HE NODDED toward a small tattered figure standing nearest the fire, — a scrawny derelict of indeterminate age who gestured with twisted, claw-like hands. His voice was pitched to a hoarse whisper, as if he were forever confiding some dreadful secret. With the firelight reflected in gleaming eyeballs he raised his head and gestured with a jerky motion.

"Paris, London, Rome. Yes, I played everywhere, all over the world. For the king once, too. You hear me—I played for the king. Now I've forgotten which king. Denmark, I think . . ." His voice trailed off.

The others nudged each other, and one of them raised his voice. "Hey, Archie. Tell us agin. What'd the king say?" "Yus, yus. Tell us," the others said.

The small figure lifted his head once more. "The king? You mean when I played for the king? Yes, I did do that. I don't quite remember the year, but what a night. I had just finished a group of Chopin . . . and the king was there, Denmark I think . . . and afterwards . . ."

"But what'd he say?" Another voice broke in. "What'd he say?"

"Yus, yus. What'd he say. What'd the king say?"

THE OLDER MAN nudged his companion. "Rich, ain't it. From Frisco to Beantown, it's the same. Just git 'im started. A famous piana player till his paws got crippled . . . 'at's his story."

But the younger man unheeding stood motionless, head craned forward, jaw slackened. Suddenly he swung around, a terrible picture of misery and dispair.

"Denmark . . . Chopin . . . tickets were five dollars. What a crazy, crazy world!"

LISTEN, WORLD! — By Elsie Robinson

DON'T NIBBLE at life!
Don't take cautious little mouthfuls, fearing lest you nick your teeth!

BITE DEEP AND HARD!
Welcoming your rich gift
Proudly, gratefully;
Using your great chance
Eagerly, recklessly —
As kings and adventurers
Use their strength
And treasure.

BITE HARD! BITE DEEP! AND KEEP ON BITING!

Will it be dangerous?
Will you sometimes
Wish you hadn't?
Will you suffer from
Remorse and self-pity?
You certainly will!
And the Play-Safe Clan
Will snort and sneer
And cry: "Ah-ha!
"We told you so!"
But let them!

BITE
FOR THAT DEEP OF LIFE WILL BE WORTH ALL YOU HAVE TO PAY FOR IT!
AND YOU'LL BE RICHER
BY THAT MUCH
THAN ALL YOUR CAREFUL NEIGHBORS!

To the world
You may still Seem poor, obscure
And commonplace—
But in yourself
You will be reborn!
You will dream
Heroic dreams
And dare
Tremendous experiments—
And come
Enormous croppers.
But even the croppers
Will show a profit.
For to those who seek
To learn the secret
Of themselves
And their fellow men,
NOTHING SUCCEEDS
LIKE FAILURE!
ONE BLUNDER WILL MAKE YOU
NEARER AND DEARER
BROTHER
THAN A THOUSAND TRIUMPHS!

DEEP
YOUR IMAGINATION—AND FOLLOW
YOUR CURIOSITY—AND USE YOUR FIRE!
FORGET THE RISKS.
IGNORE THE PENALTIES.

IS CELERY JUICE GOOD FOOD SUBSTITUTE? | WHAT IS THE ACID CONTENT OF SPINACH?

By DR. WALTER H. EDDY
Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

Questions concerning foods, sanitation, and health will be answered only if a stamped, addressed envelope accompanies your request. No exceptions can be made to this rule. Celery Juice Is a Poor Substitute for Food

I have been advised to drink a quart of celery juice between four and eight o'clock, and nothing more for the evening meal. The juice is made from boiling the celery, and it is to clear the blood, the kidneys, and the bladder. Is there any virtue in it for the above organs, and does boiling spoil any of the vitamins?

Mrs. F. J. F., Nebr.

I doubt if the information that to drink a quart of celery juice from four to eight o'clock and to take nothing more for the evening meal will clear the blood, the kidneys, and the bladder, is based upon any scientific data. I know of no virtue in it for the above organs.

The only vitamin that is impaired in the cooking is vitamin C, which protects against scurvy. We have found that this vitamin is destroyed by contact with air, consequently the cooking method which eliminates air during the process tends to protect that particular vitamin. I see no reason for using celery as you describe.

VITAMIN C is the anticorbutic vitamin, because its absence from the diet results in scurvy. It is particularly abundant in fruits, green vegetables and milk. Oranges, lemons and tomatoes are the richest known sources.

The Acid Content of These Foods Not Harmful

I have heard the statement that spinach and sorrel contain such a large amount of oralic acid that they can be eaten only when the water has been thrown away. This destroyes the food value of it, leaving only bulk as its benefit. Is this generally believed true?

Mrs. L. W. H., Ct.

It is true that spinach and sorrel contain oxalic acid, but the evidence that I have examined indicates that no harm comes to the body from the amounts present in ordinary portions, even though the water is retained. Dr. Katherine Blunt of the University of Chicago investigated this subject rather thoroughly a year ago, and her finds support this viewpoint.

Try Ritzy Stuffings

By MARTHA LEE

Consider carefully the stuffing for the holiday fowl—it's such an important element in turning out the kind of a bird that makes Thanksgiving memorable.

That is the advice of Louis Diat, chief chef of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel of New York City, whose culinary talents are well known.

"Each type of poultry demands a special kind of stuffing," he explains.

Here are the recipes for his favorite dressings. Impress the family this year with a bird done this way.

FRESH CHESTNUT STUFFING A LA RITZ

2 lbs. chestnuts
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ cup butter, melted
1 cup uncooked veal, diced or pressed through a meat chopper

Shell and blanche chestnuts and force through a ricer. Add remaining ingredients, mixing lightly. Makes approximately 3½ cups stuffing, or enough for one 5-pound bird.

RITZ-CARLTON STUFFING

3 cups soft bread crumbs
1 lb. chicken livers, quartered
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
2 bay leaves
Pinch of ginger
Chopped parsley
3 onions

Saute chopped onions in butter, together with liver and bay leaves. Add salt, butter, parsley, pepper and ginger. Then add bread crumbs moistened with milk and mix lightly until blended. Makes enough for one 5-pound bird.

Flannel is up in the glamour class now . . . for it's notably slim-looking and trig . . . particularly in the tailored young robe we show. It has a chichi touch in white satin piping, just a mere edge of it here and there, and a neat slit-pocket. A pearly button has a monogram effect in golden metal. Nifty looking in deep wine. $8.95.

That swirling chenille robe is a luxury lady with hardsense ideas. In spite of its pamperish look, it doesn't take fussing to keep it that way; just launder and hang up to dry, needs no ironing! Interesting with creamy white tufting on a dusty pastel ground. Cardigan neckline and bracelet length sleeves, and only $5.98.

Like a baby coat . . . the satiny quilted and embroidered bed jacket, to make you look prized and thoroughly babied . . . delicate shade of blue is choice. Nice roll-over collar. Only $3.98.

You Can Be Beautiful

Red of Barberries

By ARLINE GOULD

PERHAPS you've wondered what lipstick was so stunningly duplicated on the Harper's Bazaar cover . . . standing out with a deep, rich brightness above the dark plaid country suit the model wore . . . Well, it's no less than a new creation called "barberry."

True enough, it catches the subdued fire of those bitter little berries—just when they've been touched with frost and wonder . . . and the very color seems tart, tangy.

This is a vermilion red, with overtones of burned-in darkness that yields drama for anything you wear . . . we recommend it particularly if your wardrobe is based on sober tones, and you're a little sparing about other accents. The effect is super-chic if you tone down all colors to the burning look of your lips . . .

Probably you've watched with interest the influx of real red into make-up . . . and measured with your eyes the blending of fuchsia, geranium, blue or yellow tones . . . You've realized, with us, that every red was a different red. You'll do well to consider your choice carefully. And if you want one that's newer than new and quite unlike any of the others, "barberry" will be it.

If you'd like to learn about this new red tone lipstick, "barberry," phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Corio Week For Howard Fans

Burlesque's greatest beauty, queenly Ann Corio, returns to the O'd Howard at the head of the finest cast she has ever assembled for a revue.

Ann Corio

In her "Girls in Blue" she wears gorgeous costumes and has a complete new dance routine.

Heading the comedy division are Billy Fields and John Barry. The lovelies include Cissy Lee, Evelyn Brooks, Lillian Cairns and Norma Hayes.

Others in the cast are Billy Lee, Jack LaMont, the Gregory Sisters, the Apollo Trio, Carmen and Brenda, South American dancers; Four Step Brothers, colored dancing team; Laurel Harmon and Whistling Rufus.

On the screen are "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," with Tommy Kelly and Mae Robson, and "Arizona Legion," co-starring George O'Brien and Lorraine Johnson.

Hardwicke In Cohan Role

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, last seen here in Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance," will be returning in "Madame, Will You Walk?" the Sidney Howard comedy in which George M. Cohan opened in Baltimore several weeks ago.

Cohan, finding the role unsuitable, stepped out after playing a week each in Baltimore and Washington.

In Washington last night, Sir Cedric agreed to go into "Madame Will You Walk?"

ELSIE ROBINSON writes the woman's viewpoint, discusses regularly in the Boston American every day affairs and problems.

ROSITA ROYCE
Globe Headliner

Doves Costume Globe's Star

Costumed by a covey of cooing turtle doves, Rosita Royce, sensational dancer of the New York World's Fair, makes her New England debut on the Globe Burlesque stage this week.

La Royce's unique strip-tease gives the bird to such quaint props as fans and bubbles and so on.

In pursuance of its policy of five starring burlesquers for each week's show, the holiday week revue features Virginia Jones, Buster Phillips, Kayla Foster, Lovodis and Joy St. Clair.

Mandy Kay continues as top comic, assisted by Al Pharr, Harry Ryan, Irving Benson and Les Golden. Others in the company are Jackie Gale, Phil and Phyllis Penny and Everett and Stevens.

There is to be a special Thanksgiving Eve midnight show Wednesday.

Della Carroll Headlines Gayety's Burlesque Bill

Gathering up her string-of-pearls costume and her toothbrush, Della Carroll is reported to have given the Nazis the brush-off in no uncertain terms when they attempted to coerce her into joining the gooseestep parade in Vienna some months ago.

Della Carroll

Returning to our star-spangled shores, she was warmly welcomed by New York World's Fair pleasure-seekers and sundry night-club patrons when she performed her spectacular artist's dance attired only in her string-of-pearls scanties.

Appearing with her in this week's "Red, Hot and Beautiful" burlesque revue at the Gayety are Jean Lee, Irma Vogelee, Jane Foster, Flory Joyce, the Six Hollywood Jitterbugs, Yvonne and St. Clair, Herbie Faye, Bert Carr, Al Golden, Jr., Jack Shaw, Bobby Faye and Jack Lyons.

On the screen are "Every Day's a Holiday," starring Mae West, and "Coast Guard."

BEACON'S FILMS

Bing Crosby in "The Starmaker" and Chester Morris and Lucille Ball in "Five Came Back" are the star attractions at the Beacon, which is also showing the latest newsreels and selected short subjects.

Tremont Shows 'Chips' Film Hit

"Goodbye Mr. Chips," with Robert Donat and Greer Garson, and "Four's a Crowd," co-starring Errol Flynn and Olivia De Havilland, are the Tremont's current attractions.

Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne, co-starring in "When Tomorrow Comes," and Lew Ayres and Lana Turner, in "These Glamour Girls," are the romantic twosome domiciliating the Normandie screen.

SHUBERT PREMIERE TONIGHT FOR 'THREE AFTER THREE'

DOUG FAIRBANKS, JR., and Margaret Lockwood play the top roles in "Rulers of the Sea," opening Thursday at the Metropolitan.

New Shubert, Copley Shows

OPENING TONIGHT

SHUBERT—"Three After Three," new musical with Simone Simon, Mitzi Green and Mary Brian as the parties of the first part, and Art Jarratt, Earl Oxford and Roger Converse the parties of the second part. Book by Guy Bolton, Parke Levy and Alan Lipscott.

Score by Johnny Mercer and Hoagy Carmichael. A Ruth Selwyn-Messrs. Shubert production. Featured in cast are Frances Williams, Marty May, Bostock and Dudley, the Martins and Stepin Fetchit.

COPLEY—"Goodbye Again," by Alan Scott and George Haight, stars Erford Gage supported by Vola Blakely, Helen Walker, Alice Wiley, Wendell Corey and Casey Walters. Gage again directs the Alan Gray Holmes players.

CONTINUING

PLYMOUTH—"Tobacco Road," the Jack Kirkland play based on Erskine Caldwell's novel, carries on this week with Charles Timblin in the Jeeter Lester role. The original production has played six years on Broadway, breaking all long-distance run records, and still plays on.

IN PROSPECT

DEC. 4—"When We Are Married," J. B. Priestly's latest farce-comedy, is due at the Wilbur for a pre-Broadway engagement, with a starry cast headed by Estelle Winwood, Alison Skipworth, J. C. Nugent, Ann Andrews and Percy Kilbride. It is a Robert Henderson production.

DEC. 25—"Mamba's Daughters," dramatization by DuBose and Dorothy Hayward of their own novel of the same name, comes to the Plymouth with Ethel Waters as Hagar, the noble, self-sacrificing Negro mother role she created in the Broadway production. Fredi Washington plays the daughter.

Amazing Air Feats for Keith's

Clipping tree-tops, hedge hopping over automobiles and people, zooming straight up sheer cliffs and making landings and takeoffs in almost inaccessible mountain crevasses are some of the hazardous flying feats you'll see in "20,000 Men a Year," Twentieth Century-Fox release of the Cosmopolitan production due Thanksgnving Day on Keith-Memorial screen.

Paul Mantz, who designed and installed much of the appartus the late Amelia Earhart used in her "flying laboratory" and accompanied her on many of her trips, performed these amazing flying feats. They are such an important contribution to the picture, in the opinion of Executive Producer Sol M Wurtzel, that Mantz has been given screen credit.

Commander Frank Wead wrote the story after the United States government launched its program of flight training in colleges last spring, a program which will result ultimately in 20,000 trained pilots yearly.

At his request, Darryl F. Zanuck production chief, allowed Wurtzel to make the picture. The latter's first step was to assign Writes Lou Breslow and Owen Francisco to the University of Washington at Seattle to study the operation of the project.

Wurtzel gave the writers two orders.

"I don't want a lot of newsreel shots of students studying aeronautics," he said. "I want a dramatic story with a lot of comedy. And I want a lot of thrills, but I don't want a lot of plane crashes and mangled bodies."

Writers Breslow and Francisco are said to have followed instructions so brilliantly that, after a first reading of the script, Leading Man Randolph Scott, who plays the role of the grounded transport pilot who becomes the college flying instructor, made a deal for a plane.

Preston Foster, who portrays the role of a Civil Aeronautics Authority official, also is a flying enthusiast although his first love in motor-driven craft is speedboats. He spends a great deal of time at sea on a 50-foot cabin cruiser.

Third aviation bug in the cast is George Ernest, young member of the screen's Jones Family. George's brother, Harry Hjorth, is 26 and the youngest aeronautical designer and engineer in America. Employed by Douglas Aircraft, he assisted in designing the de-icing system used on the DC-4, largest land commercial transport in the world.

Margaret Lindsay, Robert Shaw, Mary Healy, Kane Richmond, and Maxie Rosenbloom, other principals in the cast, are chiefly passenger fliers.

Teamed with "20,000 Men A Year" on Keith-Memorial screen holiday week is "Day-Time Wife," co-starring Tyrone Power and Linda Darnell, the screen's new "find" who has won top billing with her second screen appearance. Power plays a light comedy role.

Bernhardt Voice Found on Recording

The voice of the Divine Sarah is not lost to the world, after all. Last week in New York, a Sarah Bernhardt recording, made in 1897, was discovered. It is a recitation from Rostand's "La Samaritaine."

MARGARET LINDSAY and Randolph Scott are a happy twosome in this scene from "20,000 Men a Year," Cosmopolitan's newest hit coming to the Keith Memorial on Thursday.

Hollywood Paragraphs

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27—Chatter in Hollywood: Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler almost got together for a big kiss-and-make-up scene at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Hollywood—and then something went wrong at the last moment.

Al checked into the hospital suffering from a bad cold and when Ruby heard the news, she hurried to his side. They talked for hours, and I understand Al begged her to reconsider and call off the divorce.

But suddenly Ruby flew out of the room—and Al is now admitting there isn't a chance of their getting together again. He checked out of the hospital the following morning.

A Line or Two: Phyllis Brooks isn't getting a chance to think about her broken engagement to Cary Grant. She goes into "Irene" with Anna Neagle at RKO and after she finishes this one she has two scripts to read.

Howard Hawks, who just finished megaphoning "His Girl Friday" (a remake of "The Front Page") wants to make a new version of "Twentieth Century" which was such a riot with John Barrymore and Carole Lombard several years ago.

Leave it to Garbo to do the unexpected and unusual. She slipped down to Palm Springs, where it is plenty hot, to do some Christmas shopping over the weekend.

Igor Stravinsky Symphony's Guest

Igor Stravinsky will be the guest of the week at the Boston Symphony concerts in Symphony Hall, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The composer will conduct four works of his own, all of which will have their first interpretation by him in the Boston series.

The capriccio for piano and orchestra, which had its first American performance at the Boston Symphony concerts with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist, will again be played by Mr. Sanroma. Mr. Stravinsky will open the program with his latest ballet, "Card Game in Three Deals."

McLaglen Film On Boston's Bill

Victor McLaglen heads the big cast in the "Full Confession" picture billed at the RKO Boston until Wednesday. Joe Penner is the star in "The Day the Bookies Wept," race track comedy.

San Carlo Opera Bills for Week

San Carlo Opera Co. continues its 11-day engagement at the Boston Opera House with tonight's performance of "La Traviata." Lucille Meusel will play Violetta and Francis Perulli, Alfredo.

Tomorrow evening's offering, "Faust," will be sung in French, with Sydney Rayner in the title role, Leola Turner as Marguerite and Harold Kravitt as the Evil One.

Ivan Petroff, introduced to Hub opera-goers a year ago in the name-role of "Rigoletto," returns in the role of the jester in Verdi's opera on Wednesday. Lucille Meusel will play Gilda.

"Hansel and Gretal," the children's favorite opera, will be the Thanksgiving matinee offering. It will be sung in English and will be followed by the ballet divertissement, "Viennese Life." Thanksgiving night will provide another double bill, namely "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

A second performance of "Madame Butterfly," with Rae Koyke repeating her starring performance, will be given Friday night. "Carmen" (in French) also has a second performance, with Ora Glade in the name part, Saturday afternoon.

ELSIE ROBINSON writes the woman's viewpoint, discusses regularly in the Boston American every day affairs and problems.

Six published songs among the hits entitles a writer to rating by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers . . . The lowest rating in that eminent society pays off in steady, heavy dividends as regularly as an annuity . . . And like an annuity for life.

IT'S HAYES OF THE "A'S" whom the Red Sox would welcome most as receiver of the club's alleged pitching staff, and I, for one, do not believe that Connie Mack will be flinty-hearted enough to say them nay . . . (He never has) . . . In exchange Mr. Mack can have a couple of throwers, either Desautels or Peacock (the Sox management rates them on a par), and a stack of "fresh," i.e., folding money . . .

FUN IN THE FOOTBALL STORIES: Culled from the running stories of the Harvard-Yale game; "Yale was unusually smart for Yale!"—Joe Cashman . . . "One thing about a H-Y game, it gets many a guy out of nice cozy horse room into a draft."—Col Dave Egan . . . And John Gilooly's crack about "the boys with the big black cigars" . . . It never occurred to us until we read the line—"but did you ever see a book-maker without a stogie?" . . . Here's a tip to the sports-writers, by the way . . . Dr. Eddie Anderson is coming on for the Holy Cross game . . . He was planning on slipping quietly into town . . . His old neighbor and friend, Tom Tynan, might know his prospective whereabouts in case a story on Eddie and his Iowa "miracle-men" rates a spot on the "futures."

Baering Down On the News

Looks like the war will be won by the side putting over the biggest reprisal.

Revenge is sweet. But in reprisals they add a dash of lemon juice.

A reprisal is retaliation with compound venom and is a receipt for what others have done unto you before you could do unto others.

A Christmas Carol

By CHARLES DICKENS

"Don't mind it father. Don't be grieved."

Scrooge Sees Sad Cratchit Family Grieving for Tiny Tim

"LET ME see some tenderness connected with a death," said Scrooge; "or that dark chamber, Spirit, which we left just now, will be forever present to me." The Ghost conducted him through several streets familiar to his feet, and as they went along, Scrooge looked here and there to find himself, but nowhere was he to be seen. They entered poor Bob Cratchit's house; the dwelling he had visited before; and found the mother and the children seated round the fire.

Quiet. Very quiet. The noisy little Cratchits were as still as statues in one corner, and sat looking up at Peter, who had a book before him. The mother and her daughters were engaged in sewing. But surely they were very quiet!

"And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them."

Where had Scrooge heard these words? He had not dreamed them. The boy must have read them out, as he and the Spirit crossed the threshold. Why did he not go on?

The mother laid her work upon the table, and put her hand up to her face.

"The color hurts my eyes," she said.

The color? Ah, poor Tiny Tim!

"They're better now again," said Cratchit's wife. "It makes them weak by candle-light, and I wouldn't show weak eyes to your father when he comes home, for the world. It must be near his time."

"Past it rather," Peter answered, shutting up his book. "But I think he has walked a little slower than he used, these few last evenings, mother."

They were very quiet again. At last she said, and in a steady, cheerful voice, that only faltered once:

"I have known him walk with—I have known him walk with Tiny Tim upon his shoulder, very fast, indeed."

"And so have I," cried Peter. "Often."

"And so have I," exclaimed another. So had all.

"But he was very light to carry," she resumed, intent upon her work, "and his father loved him so, that it was no trouble; no trouble. And there is your father at the door!"

"DON'T BE GRIEVED"

She hurried out to meet him; and little Bob in his comforter—he had need of it, poor fellow—came in. His tea was ready for him on the hob, and they all tried who should help him to it most.

The Story So Far

SCROOGE, an embittered man who has scoffed at Christmas, sees visions that show this happier past and lonely future. With the Spirits of Yuletide, he visits the humble home of his clerk and listens in on a conversation in his nephew's drawing room. He beholds a horrible, nightmarish picture of servants selling the clothes stolen from the body of an unloved man like himself. He prays for a more tender scene of death.

Then the two young Cratchits got upon his knees and laid, each child, a little cheek against his face, as if they said, "Don't mind it father. Don't be grieved!"

Bob was very cheerful with them and spoke pleasantly to all the family. He looked at the work upon the table, and praised the industry and speed of Mrs. Cratchit and the girls. They would be done long before Sunday, he said.

"Sunday! You went today, then, Robert?" said his wife.

"Yes, my dear," returned Bob. "I wish you could have gone. It would have done you good to see how green a place it is. But you'll see it often. I promised him that I would walk there on a Sunday. My little, little child!" cried Bob. "My little child!"

He broke down all at once. He couldn't help it. If he could have helped it, he and his child would have been farther apart perhaps than they were.

He left the room and went upstairs into the room above, which was lighted cheerfully, and hung with Christmas. There was a chair set close beside the child, and there were signs of some one having been there lately.

Poor Bob sat down in it, and when he had thought a little and composed himself, he kissed the little face. He was reconciled to what had happened, and went down again quite happy.

They drew about the fire and talked; the girls and mother working still. Bob told them of extraordinary kindness of Mr. Scrooge's nephew, whom he had scarcely seen but once, and who, meeting him in the street that day, and seeing that he looked a little—"just a little down, you know," said Bob, inquired what had happened to distress him.

"On which," said Bob, "for he is the pleasantest-spoken gentleman you ever heard. I told him, 'I am heartily sorry for your good wife.' By-the-bye, how he ever knew that I don't know."

"Knew what, my dear?"

"Why, that you were a good wife," replied Bob.

"Everybody knows that!" said Peter.

"Very well observed, my boy!" cried Bob. "I hope they do. 'Heartily sorry,' he said, 'for your good wife. If I can be of service to you in any way,' he said, giving me his card, 'that's where I live. Pray come to me.' Now it wasn't," cried Bob, "for the sake of anything he might be able to do for us, so much as for his kind way, that this was quite delightful. It really seemed as if he had known our Tiny Tim and felt for us."

"I'm sure he's a good soul!" said Mrs. Cratchit.

"You would be sure of it, my dear," returned Bob, "if you saw and spoke to him. I shouldn't be at all surprised—mark what I say!—if he got Peter a better situation."

"Only hear that, Peter," said Mrs. Cratchit.

"And then," cried one of the girls, "Peter will be keeping company with some one, and setting up for himself."

"Get along with you," retorted Peter, grinning.

"It's just as likely as not," said Bob, "one of these days; though there's plenty of time for that, my dear. But however and whenever we part from one another, I am sure we shall none of us forget poor Tiny Tim—shall we—or this first parting that there was among us?"

"Never, father!" cried they all.

"And I know," said Bob, "I know, my dears, that when we recollect how patient and how mild he was; although he was a little, little child; we shall not quarrel easily among ourselves, and forget poor Tiny Tim in doing it."

"No, never, father!" they all cried again.

"I am very happy," said little Bob; "I am very happy!"

Mrs. Cratchit kissed him, his daughters kissed him, the two young Cratchits kissed him, and Peter and himself shook hands. Spirit of Tiny Tim, thy childish essence was from God!

HIS OWN GRAVE

"Specter," said Scrooge, "some thing informs me that our parting moment is at hand. I know it, but I know not how. Tell me what man that was whom we saw lying dead?"

The Ghost of Christmas Yet to Come conveyed him, as before—though at a different time, he thought; indeed, there seemed no order in these latter visions, save that they were in the future—into the resort of business men, but showed him not himself. Indeed, the Spirit did not stay for anything, but went straight on, as to the end just now desired, until besought by Scrooge to tarry for a moment.

"This Court," said Scrooge, "through which we hurry now, is where my place of occupation is, and has been for a length of time. I see the house. Let me behold what I shall be in days to come."

The Spirit stopped; the hand was pointed elsewhere.

"The house is yonder," Scrooge exclaimed. "Why do you point away?"

The inexorable finger underwent no change.

Scrooge hastened to the window of his office, and looked in. It was an office still, but not his. The furniture was not the same, and the figure in the chair was not himself. The Phantom pointed as before.

He joined it once again, and wondered why and whither he had gone, accompanied it until they reached an iron gate. He paused to look around before entering.

A churchyard. Here, then, the wretched man whose name he had now to learn, lay underneath the ground. It was a worthy place. Walled in by houses; overrun by grass and weeds, the growth of vegetation's death, not life; choked up with too much burying; fat with repleted appetite. A worthy place!

The Spirit stood among the graves and pointed down to One. He advanced toward it trembling. The Phantom was exactly as it had been, but he dreaded that he saw new meaning in its solemn shape.

"Before I draw nearer to that stone to which you point," said Scrooge, "answer me one question. Are these the shadows of the things that Will be or are they shadows of the things that May be, only?"

Still the Ghost pointed downward to the grave by which it stood.

"Men's courses will foreshadow certain ends, to which, if persevered in, they must lead," said Scrooge. "But if the courses be departed from, the ends will change. Say it is thus with what you show me!"

The Spirit was immovable as ever.

Scrooge crept toward it, trembling as he went, and, following the finger, read upon the stone of the neglected grave his own name, "Ebenezer Scrooge."

"Am I that man who lay upon the bed?" he cried, upon his knees.

The finger pointed from the grave to him and back again.

"No, Spirit! Oh, no, no!"

The finger was still there.

A CONTRITE MAN

"Spirit!" he cried, tight clutching at his robe, "hear me! I am not the man I was. I will not be the man I must have been for this intercourse. Why show me this, if I am past all hope!"

For the first time the hand appeared to shake.

"Good Spirit," he pursued, as down upon the ground he fell before it: "Your nature intercedes for me, and pities me. Assure me that I yet may change these shadows you have shown me by an altered life?"

The kind hand trembled.

"I will honor Christmas in my heart, and try to keep it all the year. I will live in the Past, the Present and the Future. The Spirits of all three shall strive within me. I will not shut out the lessons that they teach. Oh, tell me I may sponge away the writing on this stone!"

In his agony he caught the spectral hand. It sought to free itself, but he was strong in his entreaty, and detained it. The Spirit, stronger yet, repulsed him.

Holding up his hands in a last prayer to have his fate reversed, he saw an alteration in the Phantom's hood and dress. It shrunk, collapsed and dwindled down into a bedpost.

Does Scrooge really reform? Don't miss tomorrow's delightful chapter.

THE OLD GRIND

By FREDERIC A. KUMMER, Jr.

A Complete Short Story Daily on This Page

DOC DINWIDDIE was fond of referring to himself as an old grind. That was Doc's little joke. He was a dentist. The dentist, as far as Millersville was concerned. For forty years he had ground, yanked, hammered, at the collective teeth of the community.

The Cast of Characters in "The Old Grind"

DOC DINWIDDIE, the town's sole dentist for 40 years, learns he is to have a competitor.

DR. STONE, a young dentist who soon becomes interested in

BETTY Doc's niece.

Today he was attending to a perennial favorite, Lem Hoskins' left lower molar. Filing the gold crown into shape, he slipped it over the time-worn tooth, nodded complacently.

"Fits fine," Doc announced "Stop by tomorrow and I'll cement it in."

"Umm." Lew struggled upright. "Good enough. By the way, Doc, heard about your competitor?"

"Eh?" Doc Dinwiddie's bushy gray brows rose. "Competitor? Who?"

"Young city feller. Setting up shop over the bank. Mr. Todd told me about it. Going to have a tile floor, porcelain basin, electric drill and all."

Doc Dinwiddie glanced about his little office. Blackened pine floor, stiff, immovable chair, archaic drills and instruments. They had been the very best when he set up in Millersville 40 years before. He'd been the young city feller, then. The gap between 25 and 65 had closed quickly. And now . . .

"Times change, Lem," he said slowly.

Walking home from the office that night Doc Dinwiddie watched the years unreel like a camera film in his memory. His first days in Millersville, his struggle to build up a practice, his acceptance as one of the village. And then Betty, his niece, left in his care after her mother's death. She had helped make the years pass swiftly.

Doc Dinwiddie felt suddenly old. Betty was grown up, a new and young dentist was coming to Millersville. Time for him to retire, but 40 years . . . and he had been unable to put anything by. It had slipped through his fingers somehow. Office expenses . . . how many pounds of gold had he put into other people's teeth? And the bills he had never collected.

"Doc!" It was Betty's voice, gawky excited. Dinwiddie glanced up. Betty, her yellow ringlets dancing, her blue dress snapping in the brisk fall breeze, stood on the little porch.

"We've a visitor," she exclaimed, "Come on in!"

THE NEW DOCTOR

A villager with a hard-luck story about his bill, the doctor reflected. Or maybe the Reverend Smith seeking funds for the starving Poles. But the tall young man who met him in the parlor was neither the Reverend Smith nor a villager.

"Dr. Dinwiddie?" The stranger smiled a trifle shyly, extended his hand. "I'm Dr. Stone. Ray Stone. I'm hanging out my shingle on the second floor of the bank. Thought I'd pay a call . . ."

Doc Dinwiddie studied him as he shook hands.

"Glad to know you," he said. "Guess you've met my niece, Betty. You ought to do well here. Millersville's getting large enough for two D. D. S.'s" This last, he knew, wasn't true. But what else could you say?

"That's fine!" Ray Stone looked relieved. "I hated the idea of competition, of trying to cut in on some one else's practice. But I heard you'd been here a long time and were getting around to the retiring age . . ."

Doc Dinwiddie looked out of the window at the neat lawn, the rows of hollyhocks. If only he could retire!

Doc Dinwiddie's eyes shifted to the checkbook on his desk. He knew what lay beneath the green cover, what figures came after the word, "Balance." Eighty-eight dollars and 23 cents!

"You'll have to come in and see us often after you're settled," he heard himself saying. "Betty and I don't have much to do evenings."

"Thanks a million," Ray Stone's eyes lingered on Betty's bright young face. "How about showing me around the town this afternoon?"

"There's not an awful lot to see," she laughed. "But I'll be your guide if you want. Shall we start now?"

During the months that followed, Doc Dinwiddie thought a good deal on the subject of youth. For one thing, Ray Stone seemed to spend an amazing amount of time at the house; he and Betty were already followed by knowing smiles as they strolled along Main street in the evening. And the other subject that brought youth to Dinwiddie's attention was the matter of business.

More and more, the town's toothaches were turning to Ray Stone's glittering new office. Doc Dinwiddie heard mention of "modern methods," "painless extraction" and "steady hands."

A WASTED LIFE

There came at length a day when the figures marked "Balance" in his check book were only three, one dollar and 17 cents. Doc Dinwiddie ran a hand through his thin gray hair, stared at the pile of bills. The grocer, the rent, the dental supply house . . . What a mess he'd made of things!

He didn't blame Ray Stone. Better equipment, better dentistry, deserved the business.

He should have saved, put himself in a position to retire gracefully. But as it was . . .

The door of the study was open. As he sat there the doctor could hear voices drifting in from the living room. Ray and Betty . . .

". . . in the spring," he heard Ray say. "Though Lord knows I hate waiting, dear, when you mean so much . . ."

"Won't Doc be surprised when we tell him," Betty was saying.

"But I don't see why we have to wait. You're doing well . . ."

"Sure," Ray's voice was suddenly serious. "Too well, maybe. Don't guess you've ever talked business with the Doc, but . . . well I've found out some things these past few months. I figured he had a nest egg put away, was ready to close up shop. But they tell me at the bank that he hasn't. You see what that means. I'm cutting off his only source of income. Ruining him! And there's not enough business for two . . . It's a ghastly mess, Betty! I don't know what to do . . ."

Doc Dinwiddie settled back in the chair. So they knew! And he was keeping these two young people apart! It seemed so senseless. Forty years' work . . . and for what. He was useless, in the way. If it weren't for him, Betty and Ray could be married. Whereas of they had him to support . . . Doc Dinwiddie shuffled the bills on his desk. Sale of his office furniture could take care of them.

And Matt Tyson, superintendent of the county home for old folks was a friend of his he'd been adjusting that upper plate of Matt's for years. Betty and Ray couldn't object if he entered of his own free will, and he could pretend he enjoyed it. Doc Dinwiddie glanced at a slip of paper. No appointments for tomorrow morning, nor were there likely to be any. He'd go see Matt . . .

"Forty years!" he said aloud. Forty years of the old grind!"

"What's that, Doc?" Betty asked. "Say something?"

"Nothing important." He stepped into the parlor. "Sign of age, I guess, talking to yourself. Reckon I'll turn in. 'Night!"

But Ray had heard. As he mounted the stairs, Doc Dinwiddie could hear him say, reflectively, "Forty years work! In one place. And no savings!"

At noon the following day Doc Dinwiddie shuffled down Main st. The interview with Matt Tyson had gone smoothly. He was to be admitted to the home on condition he tended the other inmates' dental needs. A fair arrangement, but . . . Doc shuddered. The place had seemed like a mausoleum.

How many others had climbed them, in pain, in fear, to find relief at his hands!

"Betty!" he exclaimed. "Ray! What on earth . . ."

It would be hard to give up the little office, for all its faded wallpaper, rough pine floor, and old-fashioned apparatus.

Still, he couldn't be a drag on those two, just starting out. And he had no right to continue practice now his hand was beginning to shake . . .

HIDDEN TREASURE

At the landing Doc paused. Voices sounded within the office. Patients never waited his return. He pushed open the door . . . stood frozen, his eyes wide.

The office was a scene of ruin. Everything movable had been shoved into the waiting room, and the floorboards lifted by means of a crowbar.

Kneeling on the bare rafters were Betty and Ray, carefully scooping up the dust and debris from the exposed air-space. More, they seemed to be sifting it into a large porcelain bowl. Doc Dinwiddie gasped.

"Betty!" he exclaimed. "Ray! What on earth . . ."

"We're breaking into your savings bank," Betty laughed excitedly. "Look!" She exhibited the bowl. The gray dust was alive with glittering, yellowish particles.

"But" . . . Doc Dinwiddie frowned . . . "I don't understand . . ."

"It was my idea, sir." Ray's dust-smeared face broke into a grin. "After I heard what you said last night about 40 years' work in this office. And when I asked her, Betty told me the floor wasn't tile, but rough boards. Right away I thought of the gold that must have fallen between them. Ends of gold wire, dust from grinding, filing, bits from fillings. Sifting through the cracks in the floor, packed into the boards the . . ."

"You know how little gold it takes to make a pound, troy. And figuring a loss of half a pound a year for 40 years, there ought to be roughly 20 troy pounds of pure dental gold in, or dust, or ground into the wood. Which, at thirty-five dollars an ounce, comes to about eighty-five hundred dollars."

Doc Dinwiddie blinked. Forty years of grinding crowns, fillings, bridgework . . . and he'd created a savings bank beneath the floor of his office! Eighty-five hundred dollars! No fortune, but ample for his small wants. That rest he'd been wanting . . . afternoons puttering about the garden, evenings down at the general store, chatting.

He looked at Ray and Betty, so young, so obviously in love. Again Doc Dinwiddie blinked.

"H—it's been worth it," he muttered. "These forty years of the same old grind . . ."

CASH LOANS $20 TO $300 ON THE "FIT-YOUR-BUDGET" PLAN

Read how you can borrow without endorsers and repay in small monthly installments—No credit inquiries of friends or relatives—Prompt service

Now you can apply for a loan on a helpful "fit-your-budget" plan. You borrow without endorsers and repay in monthly installments of the amount that best fits your income. You may repay a small amount each month. Or you may repay in larger installments and thus reduce the cost.

Suppose you need $100 and can conveniently pay $9.75 a month. Twelve such payments will repay your loan in full, including charges. Or if you wish smaller payments, as little as $6.41 per month for 20 months will repay a $100 loan.

Simple to borrow at Household

All you do to get a Household Finance loan is tell us your needs. No credit inquiries are made of friends or relatives. Loans are made on furniture, car or note. No need to ask your friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. You get your loan promptly and privately.

Choose the plan that fits your budget

Find the amount of cash you need in the first column of the table. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which fits your budget. See how you may make very small payments if you wish. Or you may pay larger installments and pay up sooner. Note how little your loan costs if you repay in a short time. A loan of $100 repaid in four monthly installments costs only $6.62.

Learn more without obligation

Last year more than 600,000 men and women found the Household Finance Loan Plan a simple dignified solution to their emergency money problems. In case of sickness or unemployment, Household shows the borrower every consideration. Last year Household foreclosed on only one chattel mortgage for each 10,000 loans—an action taken then only as protection against fraud.

Don't get a loan anywhere until you learn all about Household's "fit-your-budget" plan. Read the table carefully. Then phone or visit us for further information without obligation.

This table is based on prompt repayment. Payments may be made in advance of the day they are due, if you wish. Advance payment reduces the cost of your loan proportionately, since you pay charges only for the actual time you have the money. Payments are calculated at Household's rate of 2½% per month, which is less than the maximum permitted by the Small Loan Law.

M.—Monthly 2

READ THIS GUARANTEE

We guarantee the total amount figured by using this table to be the full amount you will pay, when payments are made on schedule. You will pay less if you pay your loan ahead of schedule.

Doubts Nazi 'Death Ray'

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 27 (AP)—Prof. Charles A. Kraus, director of chemical research at Brown University and president of the American Chemical Society, said today Germany's chances of having a "death ray" or any other lethal weapon unknown to the Allies are "just about absolute zero."

"There isn't any such thing as a death ray," asserted the scientist when asked to comment on Chancellor Adolf Hitler's threat to unleash undreamed-of forces against England and France in the European war.

National Income Rise Good Sign

Best of all economic recovery signs is the rise in national income figures . . . Terms in millions inadequately express the magnitude of the added amounts jingling in the pockets of the American public . . . and everything points to still further gains . . .

STATISTICAL . . . Wizards figure national income is being earned at the rate of $71,900,000,000 per year . . . This is higher by over $6,500,000,000 than the annual rate of May, 1938 when the present uptrend began . . . The chart using these figures supplied by the Brookmire Economic Service shows what has happened . . . It records a truly thrilling story of recovery following the blackest slump era in modern history . . . Significance is added to the uptrending graph line by the progress made prior to outbreak of war . . . Note the earlier peak was surpassed in August . . . Boom psychology did not take hold until September . . .

BENEVOLENT . . . Repercussions certain to follow the national income index gain are two . . . Deserving of first consideration is the bright outlook for retail trade . . . Deliberate arrangement of the upturn could not have resulted in better timing from the standpoint of holiday spending . . . There is a 'lag' of some months before income rises are translated into effective use . . . And the start last spring compensates for this lag . . . Second, the big employment giving capital goods industries are stimulated . . . New homes are built, old ones modernized, industrial plants are rehabilitated, railway and electrical equipment bought . . . Recovery feeds on itself . . . And experience shows that once national income starts up the trend lasts for years . . . E. G. 1932-33 to 1936-37 . . .

DESIGN FOR ACCIDENTS . . . In the stock markets . . . Not a strictly new formula . . . But it can be guaranteed as workable . . . Administration stalwarts pin prick utility industry by questioning motives and policies of private operators . . . Stocks ease . . . Temporary National Economic Committee, or some similar quasi legislative group, investigates something . . . Such as announced attention due copper industry next January . . . Stocks sag further . . . Then an intermission . . . Such as the 50-50 Thanksgiving Day . . . Markets close . . . Stocks give thanks . . . The President, or some official family member, discusses tax increase probabilities with press . . . Stocks slump . . . .

TICKER TALK . . . Chrysler took bad news handsomely when it concerned internal happenings . . . In fact the worst imaginable, a shutdown during the most active production season, failed to break it . . . But what strikes failed to do tax increase talk accomplished . . . Which goes to show the depressing power of new revenue imposts even in pre-formulative stages . . . Aircraft issues are not behaving any too well . . . Reason accepted in brokerage circles is the fear plant expansion needs will drain off earnings at a rather stiff rate during 1940 . . . Weak spells, however, will present good opportunities for trading purchases . . .

LOCAL NOTES . . . Include the speedy action Massachusetts Mutual Savings Banks have taken on the proposal of the Boston & Maine Railroad to reorganize its financial structure . . . President Charles C. Handy called a meeting last week at which a committee was elected to act in behalf of Savings Bank bondholders . . . Irwin S. Decker sends word, and an invitation, to attend tonight's meeting of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants . . . At the Parker House . . . To hear William W. Werntz, chief accountant of the SEC . . . Who will discuss "Some Current Developments in Accounting" following a 6:30 dinner . . .

STOCK MARKET . . . Action in recent sessions has been more "scary" than calamitous . . . Readers will remember a test of Nov. 10 lows was asked here last week . . . It developed and so far it looks as though a fairly promising rally base resulted . . . If bullish forces are able to bring off a successful sequel to the test we should witness rapidly rising prices before the week is out . . . While we admit nothing conclusive has taken place—not enough time has elapsed—the picture at least contains many promising indications.

Rails Lead Slow Rally In Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP)—Rails tried to popularize a rallying excursion in today's stock market and, for a time, succeeded fairly well, but steam was lacking.

At the best early losses running to a point or so were converted into advances of as much. The ticker tape moped on the comeback and a little cashing of profits in the final hour cut stop marks in most cases at the close. Numerous issues were unchanged and inconsequential minus signs were to be seen here and there.

Transfers for the full session approximated 500,000 shares.

Brokers gave credit for the forenoon about-face partly to the belief of some speculative forces that the list was due for at least a technical upward reversal. On the side of this line of reasoning was the obvious drying up of selling in the past week or so with occasional active flurries accompanying rising trends.

Markets at a Glance

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP):

Bonds—Steady; utilities and Latin Americans up.

Foreign exchange—Depressed; sterling, belga decline.

Cotton—Mixed; New Orleans buying; trade covering.

Sugar—Easy; commission house and speculative selling.

PITTMAN BLASTS TRADE PACT PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (INS)—Senator Key Pittman, (D.) of Nevada, one of the Administration's most stalwart supporters, today had taken a firm stand against the New Deal's reciprocal trade program, striking a heavy blow against proposed extension of the trade act beyond June 12, 1940.

The Nevadan delivered a broadside against the reciprocal trade system in a letter to Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady, chairman of the Committee for Reciprocity Information.

Pittman said the trade pacts are in substance treaties and therefore should be made subject to ratification by the Senate, in accordance with constitutional procedure on treaties.

The communication was received as the committee, an intergovernmental group, prepared to begin hearings today on the proposed trade agreement with Chile.

Pittman joined other Senators, representatives and private organizations in flaying proposals to lower the excise tax of four cents a pound on imported copper.

AUSTEN LAKE

Harlow Anticipates Long Harvard Tenure

A SLEEPY SUN SLANTED THROUGH THE chintz curtains of Dick Harlow's Cambridge apartment. The Harvard coach sat in an underslung attitude, nursing the cold stub of a cigar and smoothing his jaws. It had been an irritating season—the worst of his long career. But it was over now and he knew the worst. Penn, Dartmouth, Princeton . . . and lastly Yale had rolled up 67 points to Harvard's meager 20.

AUSTEN LAKE

There was no stack of congratulatory telegrams on the mahogany table as there had been last year and the year before that. There would be no grand, gala victory banquet at the Harvard club with stiff-shirted elders spouting lauds at the chubby athletes and their bald, gnome-like coach.

There are still insistent rumors that Harlow would chuck it all and drift down to Maryland next year where the schoolboy beeves would be driven in on the hoof. Would he go?

"No!" Harlow said in his ecclesiastical rumble, "No!"

He said Maryland had made him repeated offers during the last two years. President Curley Bird had yoo-hooed sweetheart calls to come down and take charge at a handsome salary. As recently as this fall he had been coaxed again and again. But he had spurned the temptation just three years ago he had rejected Penn Sate's plea to come and be the general athletic factotum with life-long tenure, house on the campus, no coaching worries and a fat bundle of cash.

He Had Learned Something

HE HAD LEARNED SOMETHING THIS autumn, he said, so that now, instead of feeling emotional churnings inside his soul, there was nothing but quiet calm. A year ago, if he had sat thus reviewing disaster, he would have had sensations of frying fat in his skull and something inside his chest like he had swallowed an eggplant. Never any more!

He had lain close to death last summer and between recurrent plunges into the shadow and slow floatings back to life, he had determined that he would never again gnaw away internally. He would give the kids the best he had, but he wouldn't worry.

"This has been the worst season I ever had," he said without dejection, "But I have never felt physically better."

Years ago when Bill Carrigan returned to manage the raggety, Quinn-owned Red Sox, he had stipulated, "I'll take the job and do the best I can, but I won't worry!" And Bill, like Harlow at Harvard, had bounced from mediocrity to miracle and back to mediocrity again with inept athletes until finally he went back to his rustic life as a gentleman farmer, with his head no grayer for disappointment.

So, Harlow had sat, reefered and ulstered, among his substitutes last Saturday while his team fumbled away their opportunities and made mistaken guesses. He merely clucked his tongue a little at some tactical blunder, but there was no giant, searing headache, no snatching at his heart, and no wearing the seat out of his pants from frictional squirmings. Yes, he said, he had learned a lot since summer.

Yale Won on Emotion

YALE, HE SAID, HAD SOMETHING SATURDAY which no coach can teach—a sudden, spiritual inspiration which had prompted average kids to perform prodigies. They had had that emotional fire which overrides all the technical teachings in the game.

"Its odd," said Harlow. "I felt we were better prepared last week for any situation that might arise than we had been for the last two years against Yale." He mused at the dead end of his stogie and added, "But it didn't come off."

There had been insinuations and backstairs whisperings about antagonism between captain and coach, that had troubled him. But he wanted to say, emphatically, that he had never had a better, more self-effacing and willing lad than young Torby Macdonald and the boy's misfortunes in being injured had been his, Harlow's misfortune too. "I want to say that Torby was a fine athlete, captain and gentleman," he said. "He never gave less than his best in the three years that I handled him."

Immediately before Saturday's game, as blond Bill Stack of Yale and Torby Macdonald of Harvard had stood in the center of the pitch for the final, pre-game formalities, they greeted each other. "I won't be able to play" said Stack, "We'll have acting captains."

"O, sorry Bill," said Torby sincerely, "Awful sorry to hear that."

"Well it was in the cards," said the Yale man, "but I'm glad that you're going to be in there."

It was a simple episode which sounds like perfunctory amenities spoken without heart. But it was sincerely said in a spirit that was bigger than just a ball game between 22 lithe kids and before 52,000 hysterical witnesses.

A week of lingering around Boston, said Harlow, and then away to Baltimore. He supposed, he said, there would be fresh rumors that this visit indicated a contract talk with Maryland. He wanted to spike any such reports now. He was going there to attend his daughter's wedding. "I'll be back at Harvard," he said, "next year and the next and the year after that." Quod erat demonstrantum!

B. C. H. Tops Memorial

NATIONAL LEAGUE FIELD, Nov. 27 Boston College High school closed its season with a 12-0 victory over Roxbury Memorial here this afternoon, both scores coming on passes by Jim Ronayne in the second period.

The first was caught by Bob Mason and the second by Ed Fiorentino.

Coach Tom Campbell's boys threatened seriously in the final canto when two blocked kicks put the Roxbury lads in scoring position.

Taking the ball on the B. C. High 14, Memorial lost its first chance when the Eaglets recovered a fumble.

Their second opportunity was wasted when the Memorial eleven was halted on the B. C. High 5.

Memorial went through its schedule without a triumph.

Vito Ananis Up With Leaders

Vito Ananis of Boston College has come up with a threat to give Eastern football the novelty of a Lig-college player leading the season's individual scoring list, but he still has a hard job before he can overtake Sam Hammerstrom of Union, according to Associated Press figures.

Ananis, who has scored in six straight games for the Eagles, picked up two touchdowns against Kansas State last Saturday to bring his season's total to 73 points in nine games.

Hammerstrom finished his season a week ago with 86 points in eight games and a five-point margin over his nearest rival, Bill Sheridan of Clarion (Pa.) Teachers. Sheridan, and all the others except Ananis who have scored 50 points or more this season, are through for the year.

CHLUDINSKI BACK IN RING TONIGHT AT ALL-AMERICAS

By RINGSIDE

All-America ring stars sweep into action at the Arena tonight in the American-Record trial show for the New England championships.

Returns to Wars . . . Herbert Coonan of Rochdale, state and diamond belt champion, will furnish Chulinski with plenty of opposition if the two should meet tonight.

There will be bouts in the eight championship classes for experienced boxers, while the 126 and 147-pound divisions will be for rookies.

Al Priest of Cambridge, who competed in the grand nationals at Detroit last winter, will battle in the 147-pound division tonight. Priest will meet top ring opposition in Gene Boulden of Providence, Ruby Margolin of Dorchester, Jimmy Taylor of Lowell, Tom Albanese of East Boston and Joe Resendes of Taunton.

CHULDINSKI ON JOB

Frank Chludinski of Hyde Park, giant heavyweight, will also toss punches tonight. Chludinski has been close to the ring in the previous trial bouts and he is confident he can outpunch any of the local amateur heavyweights.

Later on in the tournament, Chludinsky may be called upon to meet Tony Ferry, Fall River heavyweight, who will resume training this week following his recovery from a severe cold.

The winners in the trial bouts will take part in the New England finals that will be held at the Garden on Dec 11. Then will come the Eastern finals at the Garden on Dec. 18 and later the grand nationals that will be staged in San Francisco on Jan. 25.

FLYWEIGHTS GALORE

The flyweight division for tonight has an entry list that includes Bill Hill, Haverhill; Tony Rizzo, Revere; Guy Vitaghano, Medford; Paul Bentivegna, Boston fisherman, and Jack Pina, Wareham, are some of the better known.

Harold Harris of Malden, a good boxer and a mighty puncher has many favorites in the 118-pound class. A comparative newcomer he has his task in beating off such as Vin Boyle, Roxbury; Frank Armano, Roslindale, and Bob Halliday, slugger from Newport, R. I.

Georgia Schoolboy Dies of Grid Hurts

MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 27 (AP) Complications growing out of an injury he received in a football game Nov. 17 were fatal Sunday to Albert Ferguson Brawner, Jr., 16-year-old Marietta High School player.

The youth, playing his first year of varsity football, underwent an operation for the removal of his spleen soon after being taken out of the game.

Harvard Loss Chalked to Inexperience

SOPHS SHOULD ATONE FOR DEFEAT IN 1940

By DAVE GLUECK

Saturday's football results went a long way towards deciding who's who on college gridirons, and setting odds for bowl wind-ups of the nation's top team.

In Cambridge, 52,000 fans watched the classic go off in typical upset style, when a hapless, hopeless Yale team upset favored Harvard, 20-7. The last New Haven hopes vanished when it was learned just before game time, that Capt. Bill Stack, blue defensive titan, would not be in shape to play.

An old Blue confided to early occupants of the north end of the press box that

"Greasy" Neale had assured him that Yale would not beat Harvard or Princeton for six years. "I have no material, no speed in my backfield, what can I do?" the report ran.

This question was answered soon after the second period and Yale scoring began. Apparently all Mr. Neale had to do was

(1) Make sure his team was the underdog.

(2) Have an injured captain on the sidelines who held the respect and admiration of his team mates.

(3) Set up a defense so varied that it would puzzle sophomore opposition.

(4) Rush the Harvard passer into hopeless confusion. The Elis followed this formula exactly and produced a 20 to 7 explosion.

HARLOW CALLED TURN

Harlow said after the game that there was nothing the Boston sports writers could have done to make Harvard the underdog. He reminded them that at last Monday's coaches and writers luncheon he had credited Yale as underdog with a two to one advantage "in mental uplift."

Three years ago Yale was favored, and Harvard won. Last year, Harvard was favored and won only by Macdonald's miraculous end-zone catch.

This year—well—same story, different characters. Harlow said among several other things: "It's been a very trying season; I hope we never have a more trying one."

You could tell by the way he said it that the sage of Soldiers Field was chalking this one up to experience and expecting a much brighter future from the now-seasoned sophomores.

With only three regulars lost by graduation, and this year's defeat to avenge, Harvard should have every obvious and subtle advantage in the 1940 classic. Meanwhile, however, Saturday's bad taste lingers like an unwelcome guest.

POND DID GOOD JOB

When Pond said "this is the worst Yale team I've ever coached" he was probably referring to their natural ability, not to speak of the ire generated. He would have been just as correct in adding that it was the best coaching job he had ever done.

With one fair passer (Burr), one fair runner (Seymour) and one good kicker (also Seymour), he beat a Harvard team that could certainly match backfield material with Princeton, and perhaps Cornell.

Five backs of almost equal ability could play any of the Crimson carrying positions, yet except for one touchdown drive Harvard reached the Yale 20 only three times.

Yale made only four first downs to Harvard's 11. This is an accurate estimate of the comparative rush strength of the two teams. But Yale was smart enough to take advantage of all their offensive breaks and vary their defensive tactics so that Harvard's inexperienced linemen never did figure out how to complete their assignments.

Crosstown from the Allston surprise, Frank Leahy's Boston College Eagles almost evened their Holy Cross chances, and took a raise in national ranking by bewildering Kansas State 38-7. The eager Alumni Fielders put on an exhibition of straight forward football power that may cause them regrets next Saturday.

True, this was such an easy win that Leahy didn't have to show any Sunday tricks to the watching army of Crusader coaches and players.

But, on the other hand, any hoped for over confidence was effectively dispelled, and the Purple delegation returned to Worcester ready to take this weeks practise too seriously for Eagle good.

Cornell and Princeton retained their standings of One-Two in the Ivy League by easy triumphs over Penn and Navy. The unbeaten Ithaca eleven ended its season by crushing a feared and traditional rival, 26-0, and definitely establishing itself as one ivy college that is the equal of Tennessee, Oklahoma and other championship pretenders.

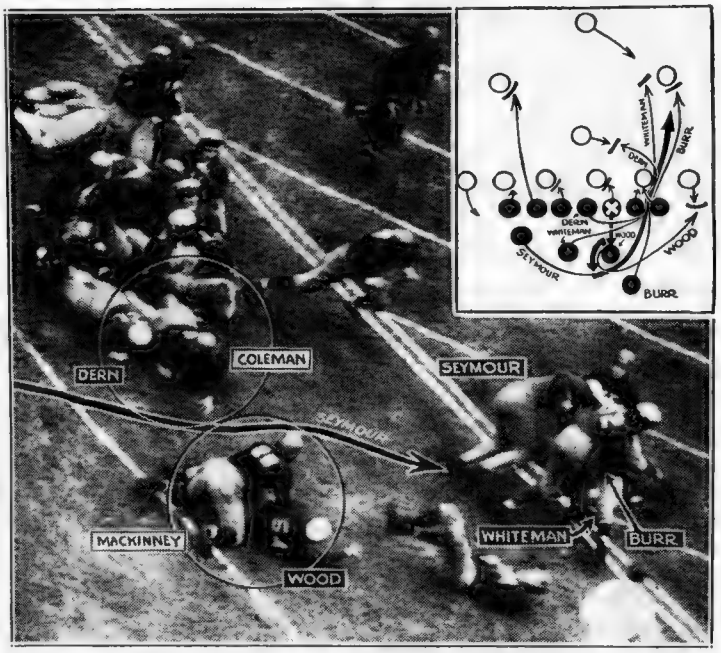
Ohio State won the Western Conference football championship when Dr. Eddie Anderson's edition of the Iowa team, wearied by the last few sixty-minute victories failed to do better than tie Northwestern. Meanwhile, the Buckeyes were losing to Tom Harmon's Michigan team, without affecting their Conference standing.



WELL DONE YALE. Boys in Blue proved they had mastered fundamentals of blocking on this play, which saw Seymour scoring Elis' second touchdown from three yards away. Play is a weak side reverse, with Dean, (No. 21 top circle), taking Harvard's Coleman out of play, and Wood, (No. 54, lower circle), doing a similarly effective job on Crimson's MacKinney. Yale's No. 52, Whiteman, is also helpful. Diagram shows progression of play.

Cornell Among 11 Unbeaten, Untied

By the Associated Press

Only 11 college teams have managed to come through to football's last big week with unblemished records.

When San Jose State of California beat neighboring Fresno State Thursday, that took the lone leader out of the group.

Of the 11, six have finished their seasons, and the others hardly look as though they would give up now after coming along this far without a defeat.

Cornell, Duquesne, Maryville, Mo., Teachers, Slippery Rock, Pa., Teachers, New Britain, Ct., Teachers and De Sales of Toledo have finished and are supposed to be receptive to bowl bids.

San Jose State, Louisiana State Normal of Natchitoches, Texas Aggies, Tennessee and Colorado Mines are each one game away from a perfect season that shows neither defeat nor tie.

Of the leaders, Tennessee is the only one to have its goal line uncrossed.

The ranking eleven:

Team	Games	Points	Opp. Pts.
San Jose State (Cal.)	12	312	29
Louisiana State Normal	10	189	18
Texas Aggies	9	178	18
*Maryville (Mo.) Tchrs	9	167	20
*Slippery Rock Tchrs.	8	202	20
*Cornell	8	167	85
Tennessee	8	186	0
*Duquesne	8	142	33
Colorado Mines	7	230	38
*New Britain (Ct.) Tchrs.	6	163	12
*De Sales (Toledo)	6	125	0

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

ALL DOUBT ABOUT Dick Harlow returning to Harvard as football coach next fall was dispelled when Yale scored a decisive 20-7 victory over the Crimson in the Stadium . . . Harlow isn't the type to walk away from a job while his team is losing . . . Dick will be back at Harvard next fall and with a more experienced team should do better.

Harvard's sophomore's got the jitters and blew wide open in the first five minutes of the Yale game . . . They reminded me of the Pittsburgh Pirates of 1938 who lost their lead in the National League race to the Cubs when they appeared certain of stepping into the world's series . . . At the time I referred to the Pirates as the jitterBucs, and the monicker was picked up by sports writers all over the country . . . Against Yale the Harvard players didn't even look like jitterbugs . . . They failed to excel in any branch of the game, and busied themselves for most of the afternoon making glaring errors . . . The good prep school teams of Andover and Exeter of 25 years ago would have beaten the Harvard team that lost to Yale.

Yale placed a second class team in the field . . . Other than spirit and the ability to limit the number of its mistakes it did not show much in the way of football . . . Yet it was good enough to beat Harvard . . . Harvard must be satisfied in having had a good band this year.

Harvard has been on the defensive in football matters all season . . . Even the statements issued from time to time by the Harvard A. A. have been of a defensive character, and they have not tended to build football spirit at Cambridge . . . A young, inexperienced team cracked under the entire situation, and gave as poor an exhibition of football as a Harvard team has ever put up in the Stadium.

I think Dick Harlow expected the worst early in the week when he told me he was nervous over what he feared his inexperienced club might do in the Yale game.

Most of the members of this year's Harvard team will be back at Cambridge next fall . . . Dick Harlow at least will not have to spend hours teaching his players the fundamentals of football . . . As a result Harvard should be able to get off to a better start in 1940 than it did this year.

Harvard Football Policy Unchanged

HARVARD'S FOOTBALL policy will remain unchanged . . . No effort will be made to attract leading prep and high school football players to Harvard by athletic scholarships, free lodging and food and a job . . . Prospective football players will have to pass the regular entrance examinations and keep up in their studies if they are to be eligible to be pushed around in the Stadium on Saturday afternoons.

President Conant and Athletic Director Bill Bingham are set on this policy, and they may be right . . . It is still possible that the chief purpose of a University is to educate the youth of the country for the high places in the educational, civic, public and industrial life of the nation.

Some of the 50,000 persons who paid $3.85 each to shiver in the Stadium on Saturday may not agree with this theory . . . They may have foolish notions that college football is somewhat commercial when the gate receipts run close to $200,000 and the college athletic department pockets most of the money . . . It is difficult for some people to reconcile pure amateurism with a sport which pays fancy salaries to those persons who direct the show, while a bunch of youngsters get whacked around for the glory of dear old alma mater.

I have always felt there was a great deal of hypocrisy about college football . . . Surely if the game were put on merely for the physical benefit of the students there should not be an admission charge as high as $3.85 . . . Such a price scale gives ammunition to those persons who insist college football is a highly developed commercialized game with immature boys its real victims.

This is why I have always considered it unfair to criticize college football players even when they have given a miserable performance . . . They are playing the best they can, and the fact an admission charge is made for persons to watch the games is the result of the action of an athletic department rather than of the boys themselves.

What Is a Good Football Player Worth?

IF ONE WERE to pay college football players like one does professional athletes, what would a good football player be worth? . . . A star back should rate at least $5000 a season, which would be only a small cut of the huge football gate . . . A first class lineman should rate between $2000 and $3000 . . . Then if he received a broken leg or some other serious injury he would have a few financial plasters to sooth his feelings.

Top college football players have often earned $5000 in various ways during a college year . . . There was one Harvard gridiron star whom this newspaper once paid $1000 for writing 10 articles during the football season . . . The same athlete also profited handsomely from a laundry he conducted at Harvard . . . This player showed certain business enterprise that gained a reward for him while he was in college.

There will come a day if college football remains on its present highly commercialized basis that it will be necessary to pay the players in order to get them to risk injury and score touchdowns . . . The colleges have no real defense against demands of the players in view of their own efforts to sell as many tickets possible at the highest price.

The only true football amateurism is to be found on the sandlots where youngsters without uniforms and football equipment bang each other around for the sheer fun of it.

WOMEN TAKE ALL TOP PRIZES IN PAPERS' HOCKEY CONTEST

It very seldom happens that women outdo men in practically any line of sports but, in this case, it happened.

In the recently concluded Boston Evening American-Daily Record Hockey Contest, top honors were taken by three women with eight more finishing in the first 23 awards.

Mrs. Eileen O'Keefe of 38 Linnean st., Cambridge, was awarded first prize after the judges went through countless stacks of mail for over a week. For her efforts, Mrs. O'Keefe was awarded a pair of season tickets to all Bruins home game. She wasted no time using the duckets, attending the Rangers game at the Garden last night.

In second place, not far behind the winner, came Mary Catherine Connelly, of 534 Walpole st., Norwood, a pretty curly-haired miss, another rabid ice fan.

Third honors went to Miss Gertrude Fallon, of 6 Ferndale ave., Andover, Mass.

It was a task trying to convince the winner that she won.

"You know," she said, smiling happily, "it hardly seems possible that I won over such a large field. I entered the contest only on a hunch and it certainly worked although my husband and father also deserve some credit."

Only 29, Mrs. O'Keefe married three years ago. She had met her husband three years before that and got him into the habit of seeing hockey games, so that now it takes more than a stormy night to keep him away from the Garden.

The second place winner was equally as happy as Mrs. O'Keefe, although she hasn't been following the Bruins as long.

Miss Connelly, reaching 5 feet 6 inches in height, took her first actual interest when the Bruins bought Frankie Brimsek early last year. She hasn't missed a game since the "Zero Kid" took his place between the gas-pipes.

"During the play-offs with the Rangers my boy friend and I were among the many in the crowd milling around for more than seven hours trying to buy a ticket. And when we finally did, it wasn't from the box office, but from some speculator who charged us $7 for a pair of seats behind a post in the balcony."

Gertrude Fallon, third prize winner, a single season pass, comes from Shawsheen Village but works in the finishing department of the Arlington Mills in Lawrence.

The names of the other twenty winners are printed on this page.

Southie Grid Favorite Over East Boston Rival

Ivy clad series renew their yearly activities tomorrow afternoon when South Boston and East Boston, grid rivals since 1903, clash on the greensward of National League Field in a single game.

South Boston, district title-holder for the past two seasons, will close up its schedule a slight favorite over its bitter rival.

Coach Steve White's boys, after jumping off to a fine start, fell entirely to pieces against a powerful Mechanic Arts eleven and since then have had a hard time in regaining their early pace.

Slight injuries upset the team so that after a short spurt against Roslindale it suffered its second setback by Brighton.

Hurricane Harry McDonough has been the leading offensive threat of the City Pointers all season and will be the boy the Noddle Islanders will have to stop to come through to a victory.

East Boston has not been so impressive, only last week dropping a decision to Charlestown with five regulars missing from the lineup. These starters, all line-men, were declared ineligible because of marks.

This ineligibility leaves the entire burden to Joe Zito whose kicking passing and running has been Pastie's only highlight in a drab campaign. If Zito is in top form, Coach Fred O'Brien's outfit may come through with an upset.

Connell Picked Yale to Win

There was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth among the Boston American sports staff today as another tough Saturday chiseled the averages for the season's grid selections.

And the Boston headliner, Harvard versus (as well as it could) Yale, flattened most of the boys who pored over season's records, and weighed averages, and discussed pros and cons by the hour before riding with the Crimson.

However, it's an ill wind that lands no one right side up, and so the Bulldog's hurricane offensive allowed canny Will Connell, like Abou Ben Adhem, to lead all the rest with his selection of Yale by a 13-point margin. Will was the only one who KNEW Eli's exact strength, and KNEW how ineffective would be Harvard's eleven.

Will tripped on three games, as did Frank Moynihan. The latter thus retained his percentage advantage for the season. Jack Conway, Herb Finnegan and Bill Grimes, and Old Man Consensus, had four mistakes each. Dave Glueck, like Fred Lane, erred on five forecasts.

Kinnick Leads Big Ten Poll

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 (AP)—Combining a line packed with veterans with a backfield notable for its natural talent, the 1939 Western Conference all-star football team was selected for the Associated Press today by Big Ten coaches.

The only one star went the honor of being a unanimous choice—Nile Kinnick, the brilliant Iowa all-around back. He drew 10 first-team ballots.

But close behind was Don Scott, husky quarterback on Ohio state's title eleven, who received nine first-team ballots to earn the signal calling job on the mythical eleven.

Paired with Kinnick at the other halfback position was Michigan's brilliant Tom Harmon, while the fullback post was given Wisconsin's star battering ram, George Paskvan.

Kinnick, the heart and soul of Iowa's great eleven, is the only senior in the first-team backfield, the three other players having one more season of competition.

60 Attend Grid Luncheon

More than 60 guests attended the Boston Football writers and coaches' luncheon this afternoon at the Parker House.

Frank Leahy, sad eyed B. C. mentor, paid every tribute he could think of to the coaching prowess of H. C.'s Joe Sheeketski, and concluded modestly:

"If we're ready physically, we'll make it an interesting afternoon for the Crusaders. We may lose, we probably will, but we'll make it one grand football game."

Then Sheeketski took the mound and spent ten minutes tossing bouquets to Leahy.

"Frank is an ideal head coach. He's as friendly as they make 'em, and I've never heard anyone say anything unpleasant about him. His teams always show they're well coached, but Boston College will have to work for this one. We're not going to throw it away."

Cleo O'Donnell, St. Anselm mentor, as guest of honor, discussed changes he had witnessed in modern football.

Dick Harlow, Harvard, expressed his thanks for the loyalty shown by his assistant coaches and players throughout a trying season.

Ed Gately, Brown scout, reported on the Rutgers situation, and Ed McKeever and Ed O'Melia gave scouting digests of Holy Cross and Boston College respectively.

SHORE DECISION WAITED BY FANS

By BILL GRIMES

Tomorrow, at noon, Dynamite Eddie Shore will let Manager Art Ross know whether or not he'll be present to play for the Bruins against the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs at the Garden in the second meeting of the season between these old and ever-bitter rivals.

Following the boisterous 2-2 tie with Rangers last night—played before the campaign's largest local crowd which numbered 13,116, paid—Shore and Ross conferred for almost half an hour, both sitting on a trunk in the Bruins dressing room to talk things over.

Circling about, waiting for the decision, were the reporters while the Bruins showered and dressed and departed, gloomily, because the 2-2 deadlock with the Broadway Blueshirts did not satisfy them. They had out-played Les Patrick's puck-chasers for most of the 70 minutes.

Finally Shore and Ross broke it up, without a verdict.

"You'll have to wait until Tuesday noon," said Ross to the reporters. "Eddie's going to phone me then and let me know."

Shore's Springfield Indians, Inter-State League team which he owns and manages and hasn't been doing very well with Dynamite Eddie making frequent excursions to Boston, plays Philadelphia, at home, tomorrow night.

Shore was a shining star in the 2-2 Sabbath battle and there's no doubt that Ross is anxious to have Shore in uniform when the Leafs invade the Garden tomorrow night.

Shore picked up two points, with a goal and an assist, against the Rangers, giving a great exhibition and lifting the Bruins with him.

Shore also provided the big fireworks by throwing a punch at Alex Shibicky. They clashed on the boards; Shore ripped off his glove and hit Shibicky whistling right-hand punch. Both went to the penalty box for this skirmish.

Eagles, H. C. Battle for Bowl Bid

After smashing forcefully into the national grid picture by routing Kansas State six touchdowns to one last week, Frank Leahy and his Boston College boys today started preparing for their traditional battle with the Holy Cross Crusaders at Fenway Park Saturday.

There seemed little chance 24 hours ago that big Alex Lukachik, powerful second string left end, who incidentally scored all of the Boston College points in the Holy Cross game last season, would be ready to compete this week.

DAVIS BACK IN ACTION

Alex was rather severely bumped in the K-State game but doctors gave an optimistic report this morning and the end may be able to play against the Crusaders.

Frank Davis, second string fullback who had been out of action for three weeks, returned to the wars against the Wildcats and although somewhat rusty after his absence indicated that he'd be ready for the traditional class clash.

Davis, before his temporary leave was considered an important cog in the Leahy machine.

Henry "The Hammer" Toczylowski aggravated the Achilles tendon injury which he sustained in the Detroit game, but it was only slight and the Lynn lad is expected to call signals to the same starting lineup which opened against K-State.

CRUSADERS FAVORITES

With both Boston College and Holy Cross housing some pretty nifty grid talent, both teams pointing to highly respectable records and both coached by young and clever exponents of the Notre Dame system, this week-end's clash should compare favorably with any Bowl affair to be contested on the coming New Year holiday.

As a matter of fact should either team win by a decisive score and in convincing manner the victor quite probably would be the recipient of one of the half dozen Bowl "invites."

As has been the case for the past three seasons the Crusaders will rule the favorite, but the margin will be very, very slight—the K-State rout "made" the Eagles in the eyes of many.

Brooklyn Nine Plays Boston

The professional brand of indoor baseball will be introduced to Bostonians tonight when the new Boston club, managed by Freddie Maguire, meets the Brooklyn nine in a double header at the Garden.

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin will toss out the first ball to Tris Speaker, president of the league, the same "Spoke" of the Hooper-Speaker-Lewis outfield of pre-war Red Sox fame.

It will be Ladies' Night at the Garden, and the fair ones will be admitted upon payment of the Federal tax, and serenaded by John Coughlin's 101st Regiment Band.

Opposing pitchers tonight will be Len "Dizzy" Hubbard, for Boston, and Ray Bartlett, for Brooklyn.

Jack Hardwick, president of the Boston club, as well as Speaker and Maguire, are confident that indoor baseball, very popuuar in the mid-West, will become a fixture here, once Bostonians see the speed of the game.

Red Daughters, former Holy Cross star, who had a trial with the Red Sox a few years back, will make his debut tonight as an outfielder in a Boston uniform.

How Baseball is Played Indoors

With minor exceptions indoor baseball is played the same as outdoor baseball. The ball is 12 inches in circumference. Smaller playing area necessitates shortening the distance between bases from 90 feet to 60 feet. The pitcher's box is 41 feet from home plate. One base on wild pitch or passed ball. The length of the bat is limited to 34 inches. Ground rules prevail on hits into different sections of the crowd. A batter does not take his base when hit by a pitched ball. It is counted as a "ball." A runner is not allowed to steal until the ball leaves the pitcher's hand. Pitchers must use underhand delivery.

Turkey Dinner For Terrier Squad

Boston University's football squad will stage its annual informal banquet in the Nickerson Field clubhouse in Riverside as Prof. Hilding Carlson of the College of Business Administration presents the boys with his annual turkey.

Pres. Daniel L. Marsh and the varsity and freshman coaches will join three seniors at the head table, Capt. Paul Sullivan of Lowell, Joe Giannotti of West Haven, Ct., and Ray Needham of Middlebury, Vt.

5 PRO GRID GAMES ATTRACT 121,860

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 (AP)—Detroit Lions, erstwhile sensations of the National Football League, have fallen by the wayside, but four other teams still are in the running for the professional championship.

The regular season will end next Sunday when the two title-bearing contests are played in New York and Detroit. The defending champions, New York Giants, entertain the Washington Redskins to decide the Eastern Division title, and Green Bay plays the Lions.

If the Packers win or tie, the Western Division crown is theirs, but should they lose they would be tied with the Chicago Bears, necessitating a playoff.

The Lions were eliminated Sunday when the Redskins gave them a decisive setback, 31 to 7, before 36,183 spectators, largest pro crowd ever to attend a game in Washington. This game and four others drew 121,860 spectators, an average of more than 24,000 per game.

Cleveland, surprise victor over Detroit a week ago, had Green Bay beaten until the Packers pulled a "Frank Merriwell" late in the game to win, 7 to 6.

The Chicago Bears clung to their slim chance of tying the Packers for western honors by romping over the Chicago Cards, 48 to 7, running their total points to 298, a new record.

Jack Manders, veteran Bear back, scored 15 points to establish a new all-time individual scoring record of 346 points.

After the two division winners have been determined they will meet in the championship-deciding battle in the home city of the Western winners.

Grid Pirates Get $50,000 Bid From Boston

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 27 (AP)—Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Fro Football League, said today he had been offered $50,000 "for a half interest to shift the team to Boston." He did not disclose who made the offer.

Rooney said Bill Sullivan, real estate man and former high school coach, "assured me he could produce $50,000 for a part interest if the deal materializes."

The Pirates' owner previously denied several reports he would sell the franchise. The Pirates won their first game in 17 starts yesterday, beating the Philadelphia Eagles, 24-12.

OLD BIG LEAGUER DIES

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—John Proctor Fifield, 68, former major leaguer, died at his home here today after suffering a heart attack.

Outstanding quality, expert distilling, 4 full years of aging have won overwhelming popularity for this superb Bottled-in-bond, 100 proof whiskey.
